Parklandites To Vote On School Building

Special Election Called To Obtain New Millage

Voters Will Also Decide Question of Consolidating Districts for Building Of High School at a Later Date

Parklandites will vote on a new grade school addition at a special millage election set for Dec. 20. An additional 25 mill tax levy is being asked for.

As 60 per cent of those who voted in the last general election are required to turn out to make this a legal election, the school board is anxious that all residents not already registered, do so, that they may vote in the forthcoming election.

Opening Monday

As a fitting anniversary completing a full year of repairing Parkland's clocks and watches, as well as adorning the ladies with lovely jewelry, Mobley's Golden Tewelry had its informal opening Monday in its new home on Garfield street next to the Parkland Variety Store. They were formerly located in the Parkland Theatre building, but have moved into more centrally located quarters for the convenience of their customers. The new building has been attractively designed and decorated by Mrs. Betty Whisner Mobley, a former PLC student.

"With a few finishing touches, soon to be applied," said Mr. Mobley, "our new store will be will be able to increase its staff. completed, and continue its policy of a satisfied customer every time with lasting gifts of quality."

Spanaway Will Get New Traffic Signs

Highway Department Representative Promises Aid for Traffic Hazard at Community Club Meeting Tuesday

Spanaway was promised more effective traffic signs in front of its school by A. D. Mandley of the State Highway Department, who spoke at the meeting of the Spanaway Progressive Community Club November 4.

Mandley said proper crosswalk signs would be placed 500 feet on either side of the two crosswalks in front of the school and that a sign would also be placed at the crosswalks.

Another and better alternative, however, according to Mandley would be to create only one crosswalk and placing center "school girl" signs on either side of it which could be Aremoved when the school crosswalks were not in use. This would convert two hazards into one, and would make fewer signs necessary. 'This type of sign has proved the most effective in slowing down traffic of any sign used," Mandley

He suggested that the school poard decide whether they prefer this type and said that if they did, his department would replace the two crosswalk systems with the "school girl signs" next year.

35 Mile Zone

Mandley also discussed the possibility of extending the 35 mile limit to the transformers. His department, he said, must consider the following factors:

1. Actual speed vehicles traveling at present time. (If a speed limit is to be enforced it should not be more than a 7 miles per hour reduction of what 85% of motorists travel).

2. What roadside developments are. (If there are no hazards the motorists can see he won't comply to the speed limit).

3. Accident rate in that zone. Mandley said his department would investigate these factors at the earliest possible moment, and would either reject or adopt the 35 mile zone, depending on the outcome of the investigation. Blood Pool

The club voted in favor of establishing a "blood pool" in coopera song by Dolores and Mary Jupi- ation with the Tacoma-Pierce ter, sung for Mr. and Mrs. Mc- County blood bank. Spanaway is over the top! Fortyone per cent over the top, according to the latest figures available from Mrs. William Ghan, and Mrs. Preston Henderson, Mr. head of the Community Chest for the Spanaway area.

Spanaways' goal was $200, but Dennis and Timmy McGraw, Miss Mrs. Ghan with the assistance of Mrs. Velm Rhone, was able to push her district to $281.50.

Parkland went over its goal of $700 by 159.75 per cent, while Midland is still lagging at 17 per cent of its $200 goal, or $35.

Tacoma as a whole now stands at 96.15 per cent of its goal and chest workers have announced that they will keep working to obtain the full 100 per cent.

"Blood Pools"

Blood is one of man's most precious possessions, but he never quite realizes how dear it is to him until he finds himself in need of it.

It is then he must solicit aid from his friends and relatives for blood donations. In some cases, acquaintances may prove their friendship by rallying to the patient's aid such as they did for Joe Shepard of Midland. In others, however, the afflicted person might not be so fortunate as to be surrounded by his friends and neighbors. But in either case, all the anxiety of soliciting blood donors could be avoided if a blood pool had been formed in that person's community.

It is for this reason that we urge each South End commu nity to start such a pool through their various civic organizations. Because blood pools are more or less new to communities, some explanation as to how they are run is required.

The use of blood banks grew steadily during the last war, when blood plasma was sent overseas to help the wounded servicemen. They are still growing considerably to take care of civilian needs. A blood bank is run parallel to a commercial bank. Withdrawals and deposits are made in both, and credit can be established. Sometimes an organization builds up transfusion credits for its members. This is called a blood pool.

South End residents can keep up with modern times by also the ladies that worked in the organizing one of these pools through any of their various kitchen. civic groups. Each person, as he gave a pint of blood, would then become a member. He and his family would not only be entitled to use the blood bank in any emergency, but could secure transfusions for the minimum cost of $7.50 instead of $32.50, as each donation gets $25 credit.

The credits will be kept on the books for a year from time of donation. They will be assigned to the organization when no matter what the cause may be," the blood bank is notified of the name, the hospital where the patient received the blood, and the number of credits needed from the pool. Each organization must authorize someone in charge of the "pool" to notify the blood bank of such assignments from the pool.

It is hoped that when such pools are established the members of that organization will come in over a period of time, so that donations are made regularly to the "pool." This insures a steady supply of blood for transfusions.

The stocks of blood are maintained only by a steady flow Mrs. Stanley Lipke of Polk Ave., of blood donors coming to replace blood for friends and relatives, or those who come in to give out of a sense of duty, benevolence, community spirit, or for their organization son, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Hunter, "pool."

The blood bank cannot exist without the support of the Mrs. K. C. Lipke, the little guest community it serves. When a person has received blood from the bank for himself or his family, he then is aware of the marvelous benefit—to have available blood or plasma for immediate dispensing. It is because this is becoming known to more and more people that the blood bank is growing each month. But as it grows the demand will always be greater, and Day program that will be pre- Arthur Larson. Those eating bear the need for donors always present.
