Mrs. Verne Fogle LE 7-5210
Birth Party
Relatives and friends of long standing helped Mrs. Andrew Carlson celebrate her 84th birthday at a luncheon at her home on January 30. Despite her years, Mrs. Carlson, young at heart, is active and 'on the go.' She is an inspiration to those who know her, "to live each day to the fullest."

An electric frying pan was given to Mrs. Carlson. She received many other gifts and well-wishes during the day.

Recovering
Mrs. E. J. King, of 80th and Portland Avenue, is making a satisfactory recovery after undergoing surgery last week. The best wishes of her many friends are with her.

Waller Road men who turned out to a work party at the hall last Saturday were treated to a pancake breakfast "with trimmings" by the Home Economics Department of the Grange.

FLYING With Slim

Don Christensen made his first solo flight this week. His takeoff and landing was filmed on his own movie camera, so he will long remember this first solo.

The call of the South has certainly hit the local flyers. Art Wing in Harold Wolfstone's Bonanza left in the middle of January for a month's flight to Mexico and return. This week the Lakes Flying Club 175 with Paul Hoffman, Bob McMahon and Gary Peters aboard left for Mexico.

Jack Brown and the Northwest Flyer Mooney left within the same hour for sunny Mexico on a business trip.

Master Sergeant Joe Jackson, stationed at Hill Field, Utah, left Sunday morning with his Ecoupe for a return flight to Mormon land. He picked up his coupe after a complete paint job and radio installation at Tahoma Flying Service.

Lewis Van Der Cook, Electronic Inspector at Boeing, received his commercial pilot rating from Pilot Examiner Earl Snyder. Odd and interesting part about the check ride is that it was taken in Mr. Van Der Cook's YKC's of 1935 vintage. The plane was picked up in California and trucked to this area, then completely rebuilt.

John Joyce took his first solo cross-country to Port Angeles. He reported a very enjoyable ride until meeting up with Tacoma's pulp mill smoke. John is a Dental Technician at the Olson Dental Lab. in the Medical Arts Building.

Ray Jacobson opened up the sky to two more people with first rides for Linda and Lee Sullivan.

Aviation has a big job to do to present flying as it should be presented. Only 14% of the American population has ever flown. The airlines are surviving on mostly repeat customers and people who fly as an emergency flight only.

a - Wondering and a - Wandering . . .
with Jack Brown

Just recently I had the opportunity to interview some of the Doukaboors of B.C. who were then encamped in Vancouver's Freedom Square. These people have made the headlines so often with acts of destruction being credited them that I almost expected to find some sort of half man half ape creatures swinging from the trees in the square. Nothing could be further from reality.

These people presented a picture of utter dejection. Some were sitting on the hard park benches covered with tattered blankets while others stood in a group huddled against each other for warmth. Young and old shared the misery of another cold night in the open.

They spoke two languages and it seemed that when talking to each other they invariably reverted to their native Russian tongue. When speaking to some Canadian or answering a taunt by some sidewalk jester they spoke in broken English.

I picked out a likely looking subject to interview that seemed to be complete master of the English language. I asked him many questions which he was eager to answer once he learned I was an American newsman. First he made great point of the fact that he was proud and considered it a privilege to be counted as one of the Sons of Freedom. I queried him on their beliefs and plans. Some of the answers seemed rather simple and most within reason from our American way of thinking.

They are asking Canadian government officials for the establishment of a neutral commission to try and solve their existing problems but insist that their spiritual guide, Stephan Sorokin, now in the callaboose, be allowed to be in attendance.

I was told that they have been fighting for what they consider to be freedom of religion which would include the presence of a spiritual comforter of their own choice. They want to uncover the truth as they see it regarding what they consider the intimidation against their people.

I asked what their reason was for being in Vancouver and was told that since they were prevented from reaching Agassiz, their original goal, they continued on to this prominent spot to try to further their stand.

They planned to try and find accommodations for some of the mothers and children and to enroll the children in Vancouver's schools to continue their education but in the meantime most of them would have to spend their time out in the open square as they had no place else to go as the government had refused them social assistance, I was told.

Looking at them and maintaining a 'so what' attitude was hard to do. To me they looked like any other group of refugees who were cold, hungry and homeless.

Be these people the rogues and fanatics that they are branded they still looked like living, breathing humans to me and I certainly felt sorry for them while watching the wretched souls standing, nearly freezing, while the multitude of a great city stopped to watch and look as one would look upon a dying wounded leopard.

Apparently some Canadians with humanitarian instincts felt the urge to help too strong to ignore for by morning the group had thinned out and as I understand have now finally dissipated to a few holding daytime meetings in the square. Apparently most have now found shelter.

On the funnier side of life I happened on a scene in Vancouver that would make an "Our Gang" comedy look like a tea party.

I was attracted to one section of the city by what sounded like gun fire. In fact it sounded like the battle of the Walled City of Manilla being fought all over again. On rounding a corner I came to a street lined with buildings, each adorned with Chinese signs and with people throwing thousands of lighted firecrackers from every window, balcony and roof top to the street below.

I latched on to one spectator of oriental parentage and learned from him that this was a celebration of the Chinese New Year. This was to be the Year Of The Rabbit and each exploding firecracker represented good fortune for the Chinese.

The scene before me was almost indescribable. I have seen lots of fireworks but never before have I witnessed the continual shooting of so many regular firecrackers.

Cars moving thru the streets were literally covered with exploding firecrackers. The air was so full of powder fumes as to burn the eyes and you could scarce see across the street. Giant bundles of firecrackers were tossed lighted from aloft and started exploding long before they hit the street. The sidewalks were inches deep in exploding fireworks.

I finally worked my way into a doorway that afforded some protection to my bare head from the deluge from above and focused my burning eyeballs on a huge building across the street from me. Literally thousands of firecrackers were pouring down from this building, from its two balconies and roof top.

I saw one huge bundle of crackers come sparking and popping from the roof top only to dive onto the lower balcony like a jet out of control. Instantly bedlam reigned. This exploding mess apparently lit among the unexploded boxes of crackers on the balcony. Flames and black smoke shot up to the next balcony and completely blotted out view of the roof. Those on the upper levels just whooped it up and kept on shooting off crackers while Chinamen came over the second floor balcony railing like gobs coming off a sinking ship. Some of them managed to slide down the supporting poles while some lost their grip in the excitement and fell into the exploding firecrackers on the street. Howls of anguish could be heard above the din and I imagine some of it would have made a Chinese maiden blush for shame. A few spectators tried to rush over and help those who were unfortunate enough to catch fire or break a leg or crack a skull but the deluge of exploding firecrackers drove them off. In the meantime the lower balcony continued to burn and firecrackers rained from all sides.

The arrival of fire rigs and ambulances didn't even faze the celebrants who had managed to survive and to watch firemen and ambulance attendants working in a sea of exploding firecrackers was just too much for most spectators who by this time were doubled over with laughter.

One fireman got a whole bundle of exploding crackers down the back of a raincoat he had put on for protection and, I swear, he actually leaped over the hood of a moving car. One ambulance sat there literally covered with live firecrackers while the driver danced around with a genuine hot foot.

At long last the boys on the top deck were made aware of the seriousness of the situation and gradually the din subsided and those injured in the melee were carted off for repairs and hoses were put into action to quickly douse the flames.

I'll guarantee that it was a good half hour before the laughter finally subsided, with even those less seriously hurt entering into the spirit of things.

Some joker with a movie camera could have made a fortune filming that epic.

age us to build a trunk and treatment plant? These pollution men are the same ones who want our waters kept clean.

We think they know their business, that they are not inconsistent in wanting sewer systems and treatment plants and clean waters, too. We all know that they have a huge program ahead of them since much sewage still goes into the bay now without being treated at all.

According to Bill Righetti of Spanaway, the Spanaway Water District was dissolved some years ago before getting into operation because most thought the price was too great. Now they have water under a different setup, but at a greater cost than would have been necessary before.

We quote Righetti as making a prediction that if the Parkland Sewer District is dissolved now, we will install sewers later, but they will be more expensive.

would hook onto the Parkland Sewer Line, he should make these available to the public.

As to the reference of a small five mill levy being defeated in 1954, who says five mills is so small? Maybe it is not much to him but to many people this represents quite a sum.

And last but not least, I am intrigued by the sentence, "With a tax cut in the offing and an all time high in prosperity and employment envisaged for 1964 and the years beyond, how could a better time be chosen. This is spending a tax cut we haven't got yet and even if it should go through, the people on social security and retirement pay get no cut in taxes. And as to all that prosperity in the offing, I'm sure those who are drawing unemployment will be glad to hear of it.

The issue of whether or not to retain the Parkland Sewer District must be decided on plain facts, not on suppositions and probabilities. All we ask is that each voter properly and fairly appraise himself of the issues and let his conscience be his guide.
