4-H Develops Leadership In Young Adults

When boys and girls stay in 4-H Club work through their mid-teens, they usually made notable progress in one or more phases of 4-H activities, according to the National 4-H Service Committee.

One of these categories is leadership development. In this program, members are actually helped by adult leaders to learn the meaning of responsibility, take on extra work and carry out special projects involving the entire club membership.

The 4-H junior leader works under the guidance of adult leader, explains Miss Emmie Nelson of the 4-H Service Committee. "These two, with help from the club, jointly determine jobs for the junior leader."

"They begin with familiar tasks and advance to the more difficult ones. These jobs must be challenging, but within the youth's grasp," she adds.

So leaders really are made and not born... in 4-H, that is. At the end of this year, 12 outstanding young people will be honored by their 4-H friends for having the best leadership ability in the 50 states. They will be selected by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Each will receive a $500 college scholarship and expense paid trip to the National 4-H Club Congress at Chicago from the Sears-Roebuck Foundation, the program sponsor. In addition, the state winner will enjoy a free trip to the 4-H Congress.

Letters To The Editor

To Whom It May Concern: In the Times Journal of October 17th places were listed where the Tacoma Sanitarium of the Tacoma Pierce County Health Department had taken samples of ditch water. The germ count was given for these various samples. One of the places listed was 100th and Pacific Ave., west side. Now this is just a few feet from my place and I'd like to know where the ditch is. I have lived here since 1954 and there has never been a ditch here.

Yours truly,
Robert G. Clark
206 S. 100th St.

Mrs. Frank Lapenski, 9910 Pacific Ave., Tacoma, Wash. 98444

Gentlemen:
Last week's paper quoted Mr. Hicks as saying that defeat Nov. 21st of the sewer revenue bonds will "forever cancel the availability of the $250,000 federal grant to Parkland." This is in error. Mr. Armstrong stated at the September sewer commissioners meeting that these funds are still available upon reapplication. This has been a continuous grant for several years.

In checking all sources I could think of I can find no known case of hepatitis ever traced to ground germs but in many instances hepatitis has been traced to shellfish. It is the nature of shellfish to store this type of bacteria.

We are being asked to approve the sewer bonds to remove the germs from the ditches. And where do our commissioners propose to dump this effluent? Into the bay! Personally, I do not eat out of the ditches, but I do eat fish from the bay. I do not want the "privilege" of paying 3.4 million dollars in bonds, so much a front foot, however, much more for an LID (Local Improvement District), monthly charge and hookup fee for the privilege of polluting the bay. This is not sanitation as I understand it.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Frank Lapenski

An Open Letter to the Voting Public of the Parkland Sewage District:
In time people will lose interest in any undertaking be it a swimming pool, drainage project or sewers, only the dedicated few will continue to hammer away at the public, each trying to put forth his or her particular views. Our good commissioners have this in mind along with a few business men and public officials.

They hammer away at a fact (sewers are needed) and are supported by officials whose job it is to support sewage otherwise how else could they justify themselves and their jobs if they didn't? They place before the public a picture of an Eden free of contaminating evils, an uplifting experience that can be felt only once in a lifetime, while ignoring the fact that if sewers are approved the contamination of the areas mentioned recently in the paper will not cease to exist for a good many years to come for there is no law yet that "forces" a family to hook up to this system. They merely state that as long as you have to pay for it you might as well hook on. They, in one sentence, state the facts that once bonds are voted in, each district, area or section, will have to form an L.I.D. (Local Improvement District) before actual work can be started bringing sewers to individual homes, while writing whole paragraphs of the need for sewers yet saying nothing at all quoting facts and figures group, construct these small units and live happily ever after, while controlling the cost. While we who feel that the ends do not justify the cost, be left alone. Four of these on less than four acres of ground could service approximately 20,000 people, or more than there are in the present district and at a cost of less than $1,000,000 including everything but the actual cost of reversing the house plumbing and hooking up.

One last thought I would like to leave with you, while our commissioners are professing to be doing this for our good they have called this election to produce revenue bonds, a step that requires only a simple majority of votes, (example, if only 30 people vote in the election and 16 are for it while 14 are against it — the election passes and the entire district is stuck for payment in any form the commissioners desire to impose). They could assess the entire amount against your property in one year if they desired under this type of election. Now I ask you, is that a fair way to deal with the public? Friends, don't be fooled, every person who feels that there is no need to pay again and again for something you already have, go to your voting booth and VOTE NO. At least we will hold our debt down to approximately $450.00 plus past expenditures and not acquire a large expensive project that will become a burden for future generations, or place our present generation under an obligation they will have to budget their already slender pay checks to meet in the rising cost of living.

Labor Council Endorses Sewer
The Pierce County Central Labor Council has gone on record as endorsing issuance of revenue bonds to finance a sanitary sewer system which will be before voters of the Parkland Sewer District on November 21.

The Central Labor Council acted by concurring in a resolution approved earlier by the Pierce County Building and Construction Trades Council.

The resolution said installation of a sanitary sewer system would "eliminate pollution hazards which government health authorities found exist in the area," and would "aid in land development, increase residential building and better the community's economic climate toward increased employment, commerce and industry."

Fishermen Get Punch Cards For Salmon

Sport salmon anglers in Washington will be carrying salmon punch cards next year. A regulation requiring use of a free, non-limiting card was adopted at a public hearing in Olympia Monday, October 28 by the Department of Fisheries following another public hearing October 25th.

The regulation takes effect January 1, 1964. Cards will be available at Department of Fisheries offices and at sport and tackle stores and boathouses. There will be no charge for the card or its issuance and they will not be transferable.

Other regulations adopted at the hearing include the removing of closed seasons for sports (personal use) taking of smelt in some Puget Sound areas. A season closure is retained on Fidalgo Island near Anacortes and at Utsalady, and weekly closures are retained in all areas.

though the hour approached noon. She immediately replied that they just couldn't serve anymore breakfasts. This seemed rather puzzling to me since I could see the hot griddle behind the counter, a toaster sitting beside it and apparently everything needed to serve the breakfast to a hungry customer. When I queried her on the matter the reason was quick and to the point. "Mistah, Ah'm sorry, but we's plum out of grits". I finally conveyed the message that if she would just fry me a couple of eggs, a piece of ham and toast some bread, that I'd try real hard to make a meal of it without the grits.

Then a couple of weeks ago down in Mexico I entered what looked like one of the better beaneries in Juarez and when the waiter handed me the menu I asked if they had any abalone without ever looking under the cover. He replied, "SI", and I told him that was what I wanted. "This is all, senior?" he inquired. I assured him that I had a yen for abalone, so just bring it on. He departed in the general direction of the kitchen and I sat back to muse about the last time I'd sliced my way into a nice thick abalone steak. Came the waiter bearing my order . . . You guessed it. I was talking about an abalone steak and the waiter was talking about an abalone cocktail. That eyeglass full of abalone shreds did little to dispel my hunger. I vowed to delve into the subject a little deeper next time.

Then not long ago I ate in a place in Denver that was so dark that the waitress had to drop to a knee and light a match to see if she was presenting me with the right bill. What did I eat? Who knows? All I know is what I ordered, and it tasted like something else.

Then I remember a long time back in Manila ordering Philippine fried spring chicken at seven bucks a serving. All went well until I bit into the leg and discovered that it had not one, but two bones in it. I called the waiter over and all I could get out of him was, "Velly fline spling chicken" . . . with two bones in the leg yet! Oh well, a fellow can't win them all.

With JACK BROWN

When it comes to jokes I am the "world's worst" at remembering them. They just seem to disintegrate in the vacuum between my ears. The other day I happened to read a joke that I thought was quite amusing. For some reason or another this one stuck with me. There was a moral in the joke that was hard to shake.

This morning I rummaged around my desk and found the magazine it appeared in. It had been printed in the Industrial News Review. The editor of this staid publication must have found a double meaning in the joke as well, or else it would never have seen the pages of such a magazine.

Here is the joke as it appeared: "Joe stopped to chat with his old friend Henry while they were shopping one day. Joe was amazed to note from the labels of the boxes Henry was carrying that he had bought flowers, perfume and lingerie.

"What are you buying this folderol for?" he demanded. "It's all right," Henry said, smiling. "Some men, when they get to middle age, start looking for greener pastures, but I—well, I thought I'd cultivate the one I have."

The unmentioned, of course, is the wife and even along this line . . . how true of most males . . . but what of the other aspects of life? As I look back over past acquaintances it seems to me that the search for greener pastures without first cultivating the ones they had was a failing of many of them.

Quite true is the old axiom, "Nothing ventured, nothing gained," but first wouldn't it seem wise and prudent to examine the immediate before a jaunt into the future?

If nothing else this is one joke that gave me pause to think and I assume the author of same was trying to tell us all something more than just a funny story.

I've been accumulating a little backlog of incidents to relate and this seems as good a time as any. As much as I have traveled of late I think perhaps I could write a book entitled "Adventures In Eating." Four specific encounters in the last couple of months or so come to mind . . .

While walking down a street in Yakima I happened to pass an eatery wherein a huge succulent looking roast was displayed in the window, slowly being turned on a spit, and this occasionally stopped while a chef cut off a big piece that was placed under the drippings in a pan and sliced for beef dip sandwiches. The dip came from the same pan.

I stood by the window just long enough to watch two of these delicacies prepared and although not too hungry I couldn't resist. I joined the line waiting to be served. Retiring to a corner table to enjoy the repast I sunk my teeth into the delicious looking sandwich with a gourmet's anticipation of a real treat. I didn't get the treat, I think I got the trick. No matter how hard I bit I couldn't get my choppers thru the beef. It was so tough you couldn't stick a fork in the gravy. I finally gave up and decided at least I could dip the bread in the broth and get something for my money. Don't ask me how they managed, but so help me, the dip tasted like broth off a boiled owl.

I walked out of the joint after only downing two bites of soaked bread. What a disappointment! Then up in the Yukon I made mention to a waitress that the hotcakes she had served me were just about the best I ever ate. She told me the secret of the recipe lay in the fact that it was a sour dough mix prepared from a starter taken from the owner's granddad's mining claim and had been used from the same pan since 1887, or some such date.

The thoughts of a pan full of batter sitting around unwashed for that length of time caused me to leave the place with the last flapjack on my plate, untouched.

In Panama City I found that nearly all the restaurants in town were closed on Sunday. I must have walked a mile by the time I found one open. I dashed in and told the southern style waitress that I was famished and wanted to order breakfast, even

'Climate Can't Help Health,' Say Medics

The relationship of climate to health has been a subject of speculation and debate since time immemorial.

We hear our friends tell about getting relief from arthritic pains by moving to a hot, dry zone. Others report they have fewer attacks of colds and flu in semi-desert cities and towns.

Colds and flu cannot be avoided merely by living in a hot, dry climate, says Today's Health, the magazine of the American Medical Association.

Colds and flu are caused by various viruses that can be transmitted readily from person to person regardless of the climate.

If there was any "best spot" geographically for arthritics, it would be so over run with people there would be standing room only. Scientific studies have shown that changes in barometric pressure can effect pains in the joints to a slight extent.

But there are arthritics in every climate in the world, all of them more or less in pain much of the time.

If you're thinking about moving to a different climate for health reasons, it is advisable to make a preliminary visit of a few weeks before you pull up stakes and make a complete break from your hometown.

A short visit, plus consultation with your family doctor, will help you determine whether you will gain any lasting benefit from the move.

IN MANY kinds of hunting, the fewer the hunters the better, but when it comes to elk, the hunting often improves if a good number are scattered throughout the area as they will be when the season opens Saturday, November 9.

Elk have probably as keen eyesight and hearing as any of our game species. Some zoologists maintain their eyesight is on a par with that of the pronghorn antelope of our plains. It's possible to stalk an elk at right angles, but because of their amazing ability to see and hear, the human hunter is at a great disadvantage.

But elk have a habit of staying in their own home ground when disturbed, and hunters merely drive them from one part of their range to another. So when hunters are scattered throughout the area, the elk get away from one hunter only to run into another.

Eventually, one of the hunters bags one of the bulls. A lone hunter working such an area, might never get close enough to them, let alone get off a shot.

Thus the role of chance is a big one in hunting success. This habit of staying in one area is why we hear so many stories of hunters getting their elk by the animal's coming to them rather than the hunter going to the elk.

season that hunters who had the best shooting were the men who know their ducks - at a distance as well as close up. Those who weren't sure, often would hesitate momentarily before shooting and that hesitation could cause them to miss.

This is especially important in Eastern Washington where we have a bonus of two extra mallards in addition to the regular limit of four.

You can improve your knowledge of ducks by getting a copy of the excellent booklet, "Ducks At A Distance," published by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Thousands of the booklets are being distributed free throughout this state. Copies are also available for 25 cents each from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C.

IF YOU'RE a steelheading buff and don't mind a trip, some of the state's best steelheading is waiting in Southeastern Washington on the Snake and Grande Rondo rivers.

The catch per fisherman in this part of the state during November is the kind steelheaders dream of. Reports of ten average more than a fish per fisherman. This compares to an average good day during the winter season in Western Washington when only one in 10 have a fish.

Smallmouth bass also hit in the Snake this time of year, with some going 5 pounds and above.

HOW MANY hunters know the species of ducks they are shooting at? According to studies made in several states, the average hunter doesn't know many of the species of ducks he shoots during the season.

In one test of 600 hunters in Minnesota, less than half could identify ringnecks, baldpates and gadwalls. Only 50 to 75 percent could identify pintails, green-winged teal, shovellers, redheads, canvasbacks and ruddy ducks.

Similar tests in Wisconsin, Tennessee and other states have shown the same results. Wildlife people in one state found during a highly-regulated

Hat Show At Lakewood By Bethel 27
A hat show featuring women's hat styles dating from 1700 will be held at 3 p.m., Saturday, November 9 at the Henry A. Green Masonic Temple on 108th off Bridgeport Way, under the sponsorship of Bethel 27 of the International Order of Job's Daughters.

Hats being shown are from the collection of Mrs. R. G. Philpott of Portland, Oregon, who will explain each style as it is modeled. Dresses from the same period will also be shown.
Mrs. Philpott, a former speech and drama teacher, began her collection 10 years ago. She often used unusual hats to help add interest to her drama classes. As a result of her constant search for hats of any kind, friends began bringing her their favorite finds. More than 20 of these will be shown during the afternoon. All of the hats represent the American past but probably the most outstanding models are those from the gay 90's era. While there is no admission charge, a donation of 50c will be collected from each person attending. Tea will be served.

Washington's Caves Detailed in Report Published by State
Caves - 110 of them - are described in a Washington State Department of Conservation inventory report released today. Twenty-three of the state's 39 counties have from one to 19 caves each.
Underground storage and wartime shelter are two of the possible uses that may be evaluated with the aid of this report. Although Washington's limestone caves are relatively small, the many lava-tube caves of the state are large and complex.
Author of the cave report is Dr. William R. Halliday, director of the Washington Speleological Survey.
Information Circular No. 40, "Caves of Washington," may be purchased for $1 prepaid from the Department of Conservation, 335 General Administration Building, Olympia.

Boy Goes To 4-H Meet
Raymond William, 16 year old Pierce county 4-H member from Sumner-Eatonville, is one of Washington State's four delegates to the 1964 National 4-H Club Conference in Washington, D.C., April 18 to 24th. The all-expense paid trip to the nation's capitol provides a week long look at the government in action and a chance to exchange ideas with 4-H'ers from the other 49 states.

Selection of delegates for the coveted trip to the nationwide event, County Agent Ernest Hopp said, is based on growth in leadership, service and responsibility, outstanding project achievement during the 4-H'ers' entire club career, and a personal interview.
Raymond has won awards in fitting and showing, demonstrations, garden, livestock and rabbit judging contests and rabbit and swine exhibits.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray William who recently moved to Star Route, Eatonville. He hopes to attend Washington State University and go into horticultural research. Two brothers, Tom and David are also active 4-H members.

VA Warns Vets On Home Sales

Merely selling his GI home does not relieve the veteran of his liability to the Veterans Administration, John B. Kirsch, Manager of the Seattle VA Regional Office, said recently.
Too often veterans who have sold their GI homes learn later that the buyer has defaulted on the loan, the mortgage has been foreclosed, a deficiency resulted and they are liable to VA for payment of the claim VA had to pay to the lender, he said.
Veterans should understand this thoroughly when disposing of their GI homes, Kirsch emphasized.

The veteran may be released of the liability to the Veterans Administration if his loan is current and if the purchaser has obligated himself by contract to purchase his property and assume his liability.
In addition, the purchaser must satisfy the Veterans Administration that he is a good credit risk.
A veteran planning to sell his GI home may take either of two steps to avoid further liability, Kirsch said. (1) He can arrange for the GI loan to be paid in full. (2) He can allow the purchaser to assume his GI loan and obtain a release of his liability on the loan from the holder of the mortgage and the Veterans Administration, provided of course, both agree.
Washington veterans may apply to the Veterans Administration for a release from liability by submitting a written request addressed to Veterans Administration Regional Office, Tower Bldg. 7th Avenue and Olive Way, Seattle, Washington 98101.

Boy Goes To 4-H Meet
Raymond William, 16 year old Pierce county 4-H member from Sumner-Eatonville, is one of Washington State's four delegates to the 1964 National 4-H Club Conference in Washington, D.C., April 18 to 24th. The all-expense paid trip to the nation's capitol provides a week long look at the government in action and a chance to exchange ideas with 4-H'ers from the other 49 states.

Selection of delegates for the coveted trip to the nationwide event, County Agent Ernest Hopp said, is based on growth in leadership, service and responsibility, outstanding project achievement during the 4-H'ers' entire club career, and a personal interview.
Raymond has won awards in fitting and showing, demonstrations, garden, livestock and rabbit judging contests and rabbit and swine exhibits.
He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray William who recently moved to Star Route, Eatonville. He hopes to attend Washington State University and go into horticultural research. Two brothers, Tom and David are also active 4-H members.

Births, deaths, divorces, marriages and re-marriages are all occasions for possible beneficiary changes. Most common out-of-date listings are those of a mother whose son has since married or of a first wife when a subsequent separation and remarriage has taken place.
Veterans desiring to bring their beneficiary listing up to date can do so by writing the VA office to which they send their insurance premium payments, being careful to give their full name and insurance policy number.

Yule Mail Goes Soon
November 10 is the target date for sending parcels by regular mail in time for Christmas delivery in Europe and South and Central America. Immediate mailing is required for holiday delivery in the Near East and Africa. Postmaster Ben L. Morse points out air service is available to practically all countries of the world, however, permitting later mailings. Air-mail parcels should be mailed during early December in order to reach addressees before Christmas. All surface parcels must be packed adequately for the length of the journey and the protection of the contents. Shipping cartons must be stronger than those used for domestic mail service. Christmas parcels for the armed forces overseas, as distinguished from general foreign mail, should be mailed between December 1 and 10. Greeting cards for armed forces overseas should be mailed within the periods designated for parcels if they are to have a reasonable expectation of delivery prior to Christmas.

Waller Road Grange Spook Party Termed Big Success

Mrs. Vera Fogle LE 7-5210
Waller Road Grange Hall was invaded last Friday evening by close to 250 youngsters for a gay Halloween party. Sponsored by the Grange, it was under supervision of the Youth Committee headed by Robert Myron. He was assisted by 19 other busy grangers and non-grangers.
Costumed in colorful array, from a tiny little gypsy with golden earring, twin pirates, into apples hanging from strings and wee ones played pin the nose on the witch.

Grange Master David Van Hulle told stories in properly spooky settings to older children while younger ones were served hot dogs, potato chips, candy and cool aid, since the dining room could not hold all the children at one sitting.
The grange thanks the dozen or more parents who attended and all who helped. Many compliments were received from parents who were most appreciative.
Sympathy is extended by former neighbors and friends to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Walder on the recent death of her sister, Mrs. Zeldia Thomson of Eastern Washington.

Officers Re-Elected
David Van Hulle, Howard Freeman, Grace Fogle and Esther Aarhaus were re-elected to their Grange posts for the coming year. Kitty Looker, LaVelle Larsen, and Anna Van Hulle were also re-elected.
New officers will be: Leonard Larsen, steward; James Taylor, assistant steward; Stella Olson, chaplain; Keith Wadsworth, gatekeeper; Hazel Walk, Pomona; and Woodrow Farrington, three year executive committeeman.
Home economics chairman will be Ruby Myron and Joyce Weston will be pianist. A joint installation ceremony for all county grangers will be held in December to install these officers.
