Let Me Tell One:

Food Prices And Care

The postman brought some surprising figures concerning food prices the other day.

My thought through the past few years was that food prices, like everything else, were rising right along as we shelled out more and more dollars for our needs.

Like most people I would have assumed that food prices had zoomed. However, I ran across a couple of grocery store register tapes that had been around for a few years, and noted that the total was nearly the same as our present weekly bill.

A little research and the note out of the mail has given me a real surprise.

Measured in flat dollars and cents, as we usually do these things, the food prices we pay have risen 17 per cent since the 1947-49 period.

However, in the same period wage rates have gone up by about 70 per cent.

Relative to wages, food prices are lower than they were in 1949 because of the difference in wages. Now we realize that not all of us have enjoyed a 70 per cent rise in wages during that period, but at least we can figure that food is comparatively as reasonably priced as it was ten years ago.

I can't go along with the National Association of Food Chains and say that food is cheaper than ever before, because the 'tale of the tape' tells me it isn't, in dollars and cents.

But to know that food prices haven't risen as fast as other prices is encouraging, since the grocery store is the one place we all visit every week.

Probably the main point of the whole matter is that the grocers, wholesalers and producers of the food we eat have increased their efficiency faster than any other segment of our economy.

So, for the corner grocer, the large independent merchant, the chains, producers and all the rest, I take my hat off and perform a low, deep bow.

Since I do a lot of driving, I have noted recently that the traffic agencies have stepped up their enforcement program, especially on the main highways where I travel.

With the state's traffic toll rising and the worst part of the driving year upon us, the patrolmen are out in force and are working long hours to keep us alive.

State patrolmen, responsible for certain areas, are on call at all hours to take care of accidents and to patrol the streets in their effort to make them safer for all of us.

I am sure it is no plea- sure for them to answer a call to care for the victims of carelessness, whether it is a minor accident or a fatality.

CARE is a word which we have heard often in connection with poor, undeveloped nations overseas. But I think that it should be applied to the highways and streets of our country by everyone.

Most accidents are the result of carelessness and could be avoided with the application of CARE.

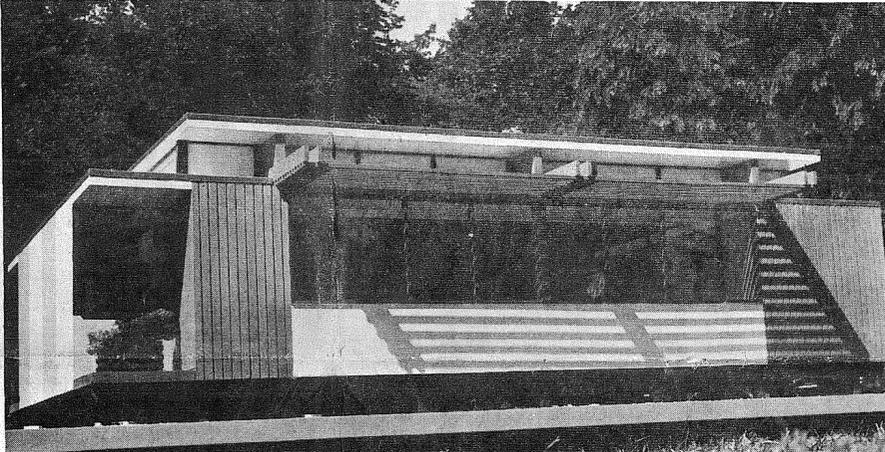

Safety crusades, such as the lights during Labor Day weekend driving, arouse controversy as to their effectiveness. Something must be done, possibly we can do it with CARE.

Under the direction and supervision of Dave Otto, cub master; and Bruce Hammerstrom, committee chairman, the pack raised money for the project thru a very successful bottle drive.

They purchased and presented to Leo V. Gaume principal, two twenty foot red oak trees. The presentation was made in an informal ceremony on Saturday, December 9.

The Christmas party will be the 21st.

SHOWN HERE is a model of the portable classroom which is now being built at the Brookdale School in Parkland. The classroom building is the subject of time and cost studies by the Douglas Fir Plywood Association and will be compared with a similar building to be erected at James Sales School.

Cub Scouts Replace Trees At School

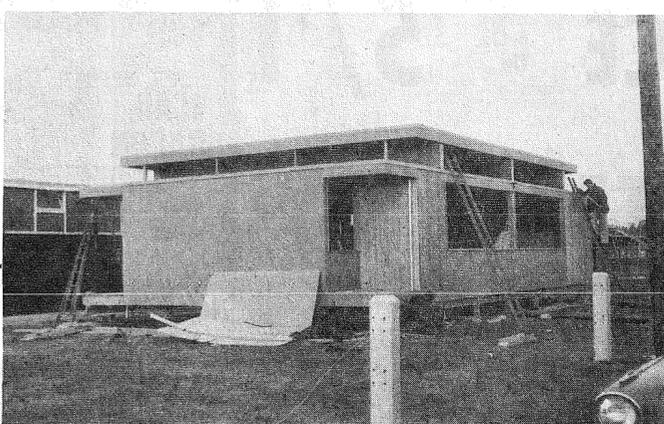

The red oaks on the grounds of Brookdale School which were destroyed by vandals a few weeks ago, have been replaced by Pack 30 of Brookdale School.

Under the direction and supervision of Dave Otto, cub master; and Bruce Hammerstrom, committee chairman, the pack raised money for the project thru a very successful bottle drive.

The Christmas party will be the 21st.

WORKMEN hammer away to complete the new classroom building at the Brookdale School. The new building, which may be completed in 30 days, is the same type as planned for the Jaynes

Sales School and is similar to the one pictured at the top of the page. The classroom for the Sales school will have more prefabricated parts for the time study being conducted by the builders.

Dairy Team Places At Exposition

Pierce County 4-H Dairy Team has just received word that they placed third high amongst 29 teams from Washington, Oregon, and Idaho in competition recently at the Pacific International Livestock Exposition at Portland.

Terri Dierringer, 4-H'er from Buckley was second high individual in the contest. Other members of the team were Allen Moulden and Janet Schweikl from Buckley and Pam Vollbrecht from Graham. The team was from two 4-H clubs, the Buckley Cattlers led by Mrs. Len Schweikl and the Benston 4-H Club led by Mrs. Albert Hart.

Christmas Tree Trends Show Taste Changes

A promising trend for Christmas tree producers was discovered by Joseph Buhaly, WSU Extension Forestry Specialist, in a survey of 250 buyers in the Puget Sound area. The survey showed that one out of five families enjoyed two Christmas trees in or about their homes. Besides the conventional tree found in the living room, some persons had a tree for their recreation room or a tree on their front lawns with lights attached to decorate the landscape for the Christmas season.

The survey also brought out the importance people place on the color of their Christmas tree. Given a choice of a moderately green, dark green, or blue-green tree, eight out of ten people selected a dark or blue-green tree.

Valley Grange Party Dec. 18

Riverside Valley Grange invited their members and families, friends and other Grangers to their Annual Christmas party Monday, December 18. A potluck annual Christmas tree supper will be served at 6:30 p.m. Those attending are asked to furnish enough food for their own families, milk for their children, dishes, silverware and cups. Coffee will be furnished, and a Christmas tree, according to the study states Agent Loren Curry. In the Los Angeles-San Francisco area this ratio dropped to two out of three families who enjoy a Christmas tree. The most frequent reasons for not having a tree was that they were single persons or couples "alone."

A moderately dense or very dense tree was preferred by four out of five persons interviewed. This is an added incentive to Christmas tree producers to carry out pruning and shearing practices that add density to Christmas trees. The size of tree home owners reported, varied from one foot to eleven, but averaged about five foot in the San Francisco area, to six foot trees in the Seattle-Tacoma-Portland area.

Painted and flocked trees were found in many lots prominently displayed to attract passing traffic. Family use of painted and flocked trees varies from one in sixteen homes in the Seattle-Tacoma area, to one in seven homes in the San Francisco area. Douglas Fir is king in the Christmas tree markets of the three states surveyed. Douglas Fir was purchased by more owners than any other tree. Ninety-five per cent of Washington State's production of Christmas trees is in the Douglas Fir.

Quality is all important, according to the printed results of Conklin's study entitled the "Home Owner Market for Pacific Northwest Christmas Trees." Uniform shape, fullness and freshness, are factors important to the consumer. Satisfying these requirements will promise a happier Christmas season for the customer and help insure future markets for the producers. (Joseph Buhaly, Extension Forestry Specialist.)

Tuberculosis once was called consumption from the Latin word meaning to "eat up" or devour. And TB germs do "eat up" the body's living tissue in the lungs or elsewhere. But nowadays the disease is called tuberculosis after the tubercle bacillus, the germ that causes TB.

The Country Parson

"By the time some folks feel mature enough to tackle the world's great tasks—they also feel too old."

WHY SEND FLOWERS?
Often we are asked: "Why send flowers to someone after they are gone?" Or "Should we ask people to omit flowers?"

First of all, flowers are never sent to or for the benefit of the deceased. They are sent for those who mourn. Each flower sent is a silent bond of understanding between the donor and the family. It is a means of inter-personal contact.

Flowers are fraught with religious significance. The bursting of blooms reminds us of the promise of immortality, the withering blossoms brings to mind the transience of life.

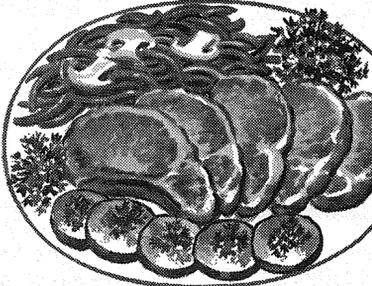

Flowers alone are a thing of beauty and from this stems one of the most important functions of the necessity of flowers at a funeral, for they help create a beautiful memory picture not only for the family, but for the close friends and public. This memory-picture will be locked in the heart and mind to be cherished forever.

Survey & sks Questions On Farm Labor

Special questions on hired farm labor will be asked in the December Current Population Survey, it was announced today by the U. S. Census Bureau. The special farm labor questions will include inquiries on the number of days worked during 1961, cash wages or salary received during the year, and the type of work done such as with live stock, with machines, or hand labor. The farm labor information is being collected for the U. S. Department of Labor. The questions on hired farm labor are in addition to the regular inquiries on employment and unemployment which are asked each month in the Current Population Survey.

The Current Population Survey will be conducted here and in 332 other sample areas of the country during the week of December 18. Information will be collected locally by Mrs. Ethel M. Hindery.

Van Beek To Aid Program

The Franklin Pierce School Dist. and the Pierce County Parks and Recreation Department are once again sponsoring a Saturday morning basketball program for 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th grade students, at the Parkland, Midland and Collins grade school gym.

The basketball clinics will convene on Saturday December 16 and the 30th from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. Fundamentals of play will be emphasized. Part of each morning will be devoted to recreation play (basketball).

Jim Van Beek, local basketball star, now with the Cheney Studs (Top AAU team in Tacoma) and formerly with the great Pacific Lutheran University teams of the 1955-59 era will visit all gyms each Saturday to illustrate and teach shooting fundamentals.

Teams and leagues for boys and girls (if there is a demand) will be organized with play beginning on Jan. 6th and ending on Feb. 24th. Games will be played at the Parkland, Midland, and Collins gyms.

Registration fee covering insurance and entry fee is $2.00 per student. Registration for this program will be held on the days of the clinics.

a-Wondering . . . and a-Wandering . . .

The people of the nation have been told by high government officials that they must be prepared to "sacrifice". They can understand that, when sacrifices are essential to defense or war, but it is difficult for them to enthuse about sacrifices for purely domestic spending by the government on schemes that smack of nothing but expanding political power.

The Wall Street Journal of August 24 cited a classic example. It quoted a citizen of Corsicana, Texas as saying, "This is one year people ain't going to get the grass hoed out of their cotton, because we ain't going to do it." It gave facts and figures on "Groceries Day", which occurs once a month over the nation when free food is handed out.

Only 40,031 Georgians got free federal food in January. By June the number had risen to 154,429. In Oregon, the number jumped from zero in January, to 7,437 in June. A Louisiana official notes that 200,000 people are getting federal free food in the state now, compared to 90,000 a year ago. In North Carolina, in June 1960, only 58 citizens called for food. But by June 1961, the number was 147,269.

The Journal article showed the expanding giveaway program has gained new customers rapidly by adding fancier fare, such as chopped meats, beans, eggs, oatmeal, powdered milk, and peanut butter, in addition to the basic list of flour, cornmeal, rice, lard and butter. "By mid-1961, some 6.2 million Americans, officially classed as 'needy', were receiving free federal commodities. . . compared with . . . 3.3 million who were on the free list in June, 1960."

Commenting editorially, the Journal said, "No doubt there are, among these millions, many who are in true need. But nowadays need is something it is not nice to inquire about; it might embarrass men with pride." Other give-away political programs are costing the taxpayers billions of dollars. Apparently the only persons who are supposed to "sacrifice" are the workers who must prepare to pay higher taxes to provide the money for the public spenders to dole out.

Tickets Going Well

Pierce County residents responded well to the start of the advance sale of tickets for next year's Seattle World's Fair, the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce reported this week.

James R. Bellamy of the Bank of California, N.A., chairman of a Chamber committee conducting the sale, said bank offices throughout Tacoma and the county area all reported brisk business when the tickets went on sale last week.

Know Your Schools: Lets Talk About Phonics

(Editor's Note: This week begins a regular column of information on school methods and activities, written by members of the school administration.)

Scarcely any issue in education has "raised more dust" in recent years than the teaching of phonics. Unfortunately, many critics of the current scene have treated the teaching of phonics as an "either-or" practice, the implication being that in basic reading instruction we teach only the "word method" or only the "phonetic method." Actually, many more approaches to learning to read are used by children and supplement a combination of both phonetic and sight methods. Some words are not phonetic at all and no rule can apply. The learning of these words must then be established by some other way, be it context clue, association, or by sight and use again and again.

As a method of word attack, phonetic skills are invaluable; as a complete reading system, the phonetic approach leaves much to be desired. Pronouncing words accurately is only the first step in the reading process. A child must also be able to understand the total meaning. If the child is to be an "intelligent" reader, he should do some critical thinking about the meaning intended, accepting or rejecting it in the light of his past experience. This step, so often overlooked in teaching by the "phonetic method," seems essential if our young people are to become informed citizens.

Where does phonics fit into the complete reading picture? In all current basic reading programs children are taught how to attack words in several different ways. In some instances, children learn words by "sight," such as their own names or the names of familiar objects. It is not unusual for a child when asked, "How do you know the word is 'valentine'?" to answer, "It just looks like 'valentine'." This is sight reading. The "look" of the word is an important clue; the word "lollipop" is easier to remember than the word "is". In instances like these, association quickly brings recall.

Children also learn words by using context clues. Many pre-school children learn to read labels on cans simply by looking at the picture. Or they can read the television commercials because the music in the background gives them a clue to the message. When formal reading instruction begins, the context clue may be a picture, or the new word may be surrounded by familiar ones in such a way that the meaning is clear. As soon as the child has learned some phonetic skills, a combination of context and phonetic clues is practically infallible.

Children must also be taught how to analyze a word to find familiar root words in unfamiliar words. They learn that an easy word might be camouflaged with prefixes and suffixes. For example, "unhappiness," a long word, will cause no difficulty to a child who is able to remember to look for the familiar root word. Another way of attacking a strange word is to divide it into syllables. When this has been done, the child can easily apply his knowledge of phonics to the pronunciation of the polysyllabic word.

It is not our intention to minimize the importance of teaching phonics, only to place it in its proper perspective. Since a larger percentage of words in the English language are phonetic than aren't, a few simple principles, used with the other word attack skills, can help a child successfully identify almost any word in the English language.

It is essential that a child be able to see differences in letters and hear differences in sounds before attempting to learn phonetic principles. As soon as a child is able to note differences in sounds, he is ready to associate sounds with letters. Consonant sounds are much more constant than vowel sounds, so it is logical to start with them. In most reading programs, a child is taught consonant sounds as they appear in words. For example, if a child knows the word "big", "boat", and "baby" as sight words, he is ready not only to see that they begin with the same letter but also that they begin with the same sound, that of the letter "b". Then by substitution, a child can make new words from known sight words. This substitution is the backbone of any phonetic program. Each new consonant sound which is taught will unlock for the child all new words that are "like" words in his sight vocabulary, except for the initial consonant sounds. Final and medial sounds are taught in the same way, with ample practice in using the sounds to identify new words.

Most of the difficulty in learning phonics stems from the vowels; not only are they much more variable than the consonants but their sounds are sometimes hard to distinguish. Regional speech differences, too, are as a rule caused by the regional pronunciation of vowel-not consonant-sounds. Since the position of the vowel in the word or syllable controls its pronunciation, simple syllabication rules must also be taught.

If the child has progressed successfully thus far, he should then be introduced to pronunciation keys and phonetic spellings.

Learning to read is one of the most continuous and all-inclusive processes in education. It starts as soon as a child begins to understand spoken words and lasts as long as he lives. It is part of nearly everything else he learns. The child's success depends upon his ability to combine all of the approaches - phonetic analysis, the "look" of the word, the meaning of the word as it is used in context, and his ability to comprehend. No one approach alone seems to be the answer.

Bankers Complete Course In Politics

A six-week training course in basic bi partisan governmental and political organization and the politics has been completed by officers and employees of the Puget Sound National Bank, according to an announcement by Reno Odlin, president. This was one of a series of seminars conducted throughout the year. Attendance at the bank's "Political Education Seminar" was on a voluntary basis and 50 men and women attended the sessions which were conducted by Frank Cooper, manager of the bank's business development department. Cooper is a graduate of the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce political education course. In addition to discussing was one of the features of the course earlier in the year. During a discussion of the bank's political training course, Odlin said, "In our world today, there is a growing need for alert citizens and a desperate necessity for capable people to become active in the two major parties. We encouraged our people to take this course and I think it has succeeded in promoting good citizenship among our employees. It has given these folks a new insight into what goes on in politics and has opened new areas of interest for these men and women."

In Alaska Maneuvers

Army Pvt. Frank W. Miller, 20, son of Mrs. Erma K. Miller, Spanaway, Wash., recently participated with other personnel from the 23rd Infantry in Exercise King Crab II, a seven-day air transportability maneuver on Kodiak Island. During the exercise, which involved units from the Army, Army National Guard, Navy Marine Corps, Air Force and Air National Guard, "friendly" forces engaged in simulated combat maneuvers against an "aggressor" force in the thick forest of the Caoe Chiniak region on the island's eastern coast. Miller's unit was airlifted from Fort Richardson, Alaska, where it is regularly located, for this exercise. He is a rifleman in the infantry's Company B at the fort. Miller entered the Army in June 1960, received basic training at Fort Ord, Calif., and arrived in Alaska in November 1960. Miller is a graduate of Mossyrock High School.

Saddle Clubs Are Gaining Popularity

The 4-H club Saddle Horse project is fast becoming a favorite in Washington 4-H circles.

More club members are selecting the horse project this year than ever before. George Purcell, County Extension Agent, says. The increased membership in the project is largely due to the individual enjoyment that a boy or girl gets from feeding, caring for, and managing a horse of his own. Club members enrolled in the Saddle Horse project are solely responsible for their care and management. Members are expected to work out a financial plan for feeding their horse and must provide equipment and facilities for sheltering the animal.

The project is designed to teach 4-H members the responsibility of feeding, caring for, training, handling, riding, and selection of a saddle horse. Club members are encouraged to keep accurate up-to-date records of their project and to develop the ability to present demonstrations and take part in judging contests.

They can select the general horse project or can enroll in a foal breeding project. The foal project is designed to teach the care, feeding, and training of a foal from birth. If a club member selects the breeding project, he should own a mare of good breed, preferably purebred. The mare must be bred to a registered stallion, Purcell says.

The newest 4-H Horse Project leader is Mr. Paul Knutson of Graham.

Other 4-H Leaders in Pierce County who have members with horse projects are: L. Aikens, Nels Bonn, G. David, M. Denny, Ed Hemel, Mrs. O. Holland, Mrs. J. Holland, Mrs. F. Jackson, F. Kibbe, Mrs. Milne, D. Otte, Mrs. C. Reed, Chas. Woolley II; Puyallup, Washington.

Wash. Childrens Home Society Cites Helpers On 65th Anniversary

Recognition of the voluntary services of thousands of people over a period of more than half a century is appropriate at this time as the Children's Home Society of Washington observes its 65th anniversary. Founded in Seattle in December of 1865 the Society is today the only private non-sectarian agency in Washington which provided on a statewide basis care and adoption for children who have lost their homes, as well as results in a wider and better care and counselling for unmarried mothers. Each year the organization helps nearly 1,000 children, close to 500 young mothers and some 350 happy couples who receive children for adoption. In placing children for adoption and providing confidential care for unmarried mothers, the state-wide nature of the Society's service is a distinct advantage. In adoption, state are open to children from each locality. This results in a wider and better selection of families for children. It facilitates, when new parents must be chosen for him, and the actual arrangement is made whereby the child and his new family begin living together. The expert service of the agency team (of social workers, nurses, physicians, psychologists and psychiatrists) comes too late if it is applied only after "placement" and an adoption petition is before the court, as happens in adoptions not arranged by an agency.

A modern child placement agency, such as the Society, places each child in his adoptive home as early as possible. Many infants go to their adoptive parents at just a few days of age. Experience shows, however, that certain factors are likely to cause delay in the placement of some of the infants who need adoption because they lack parents able to care for them. These include physical handicaps of illnesses suffered by the child; indications of possible mental retardation; a heritage of mixed racial background. The older child usually needs considerable expert help before he is ready to go successfully into a new family. Since 1896, the Children's Home Society has helped more than 18,000 homeless children. Nearly 1000 of these have received care in the past twelve months. Surely when we think of the amount of voluntary effort that goes into this service, there are thousands of people who merit recognition in connection with it -- the state and district board members who establish its operating policies, individual members and contributors to the Society, and contributors to the 30 separate united funds which support its important work. (Known locally as the United Good Neighbors, the United Crusade, United Givers, or United Fund.) In addition there are many areas the members of Chapters of the Children's Home Society and sponsors of the Red Stocking fund giving many hours of dedicated service each year.

On the 65th anniversary of the founding of this worthwhile organization, we salute the countless thousands who serve and support it.

Adoption service provided by a voluntary child welfare agency such as the Children's Home Society is an expression of the community's concern for the welfare of children, and of the responsible society is prepared to assume for them. These include physical handicaps of illnesses suffered by the child; indications of possible mental retardation; a heritage of mixed racial background. The older child may be expected to be in care a longer period before adoption is possible. Often damaged by his early experiences and the rejection he has part it.

In adoption the specialized services of an agency like the Society are most critical at the stage when a child's need for new parents first becomes known,

Cardinal Voice:

Harvest Queen

Sophomore Sue Tollefson was chosen to reign over last Friday night's FFA Harvest Ball, which was held in the FP cafeteria from 9:00 to 11:30.

Sue, who was elected by the FFA boys just prior to the dance, was accompanied by sophomore attendants Ilene LeMoine and Gloria Greco and junior attendants Hilary Sandford and Gerry Brown.

Just prior to the Harvest Ball, the Honor Society held its first social function of the year when it sponsored a small party for its members and their dates. Commented Society president Anne Malmin, "I was really pleased with the way things turned out, and I hope that we will be able to sponsor an equally successful party in the spring."

The FP debate squad went into round three of the Puget Sound debates today when it met Kent-Meridian and Auburn at Kent in a triangular match.

Individual vocational conferences began Monday when representatives from the downtown Employment Security Department journeyed to the Cardinal campus to talk with the pre-vocational seniors and discover where their interests lie.

County Traffic Toll High

Traffic accidents claim- ed six lives in Pierce County during the month of November. State Patrol Chief Roy A. Betlach said today the November deaths raised the County's 1961 traffic death toll to 35.

According to Washington State Safety Council records the county had registered 51 deaths by the end of November last year. So far this year 22 of the county's highway deaths have occurred in the rural areas. Twelve deaths have been posted in Tacoma. One more traffic death had been posted in Fircrest as of the end of November this year.

Chief Betlach urged motorists to exercise extreme caution during December. "Not only are the hours from dusk to dawn longer at this time, but often even in daylight hours the blowing snow or rain may become so bad that headlights should be turned on so your vehicle can be seen sooner by other drivers or pedestrians," the State Patrol Chief warned.

He noted that 11 pedestrians were killed in December traffic mishaps in 1960. Of these tragedies, six occurred on city streets, five took place on rural highways.

Betlach said it is extremely important to have clear visibility. He said wiper arms, blades and defroster must all work properly to clear away rain, snow, road splash and interior fogging.

Linfield, Lewis & Clark Spotlight

Weekend Basketball Activities

Riding the crest of a five-game winning streak the hot Pacific Lutheran University Knights will be at home Friday and Saturday to two Northwest Conference basketball teams. The Lewis and Clark club will be the opposition Friday night and Saturday the Lutes will have a return go with the Linfield Wildcats. Last Saturday the Knights edged Linfield 70-69 down at McMinnville, Oregon.

Coach Gene Lundgaard

will start the same five this weekend which has won all five games thus far this season. Rangy (6-8) Hans Albertson will be at center, Larry Poulsen and Jim Castleberry at forwards, Mary Fredrickson and Dick Nelson at guards.

Statistics thus far show that the Lutherans are shooting a hot 48.3 per cent from the field, but a miserable 54.5 per cent from the free throw line. Albertson and Fredrickson are leading in scoring with 17 2 points each for an 8 point average. (The game with the Cheney Studs does not count in collegiate scoring). Poulsen has scored 50 points, Albertson leads in field goal percentage with 60.0 per cent and Fredrickson is the top man in free throws with a 90.9 per cent mark.

Parkland's Jon Malmin

leads the reserves with 26 points for a 6.5 average and has pulled down 32 rebounds for an 8.0 average.

Next Tuesday, Dec. 19, the Lutherans will entertain their strong cross-town rival, the University of Puget Sound, in a non-league tilt.

Midland News

Christmas trees are being sold again this year at 94th and Pacific Avenue by Midland's Boy Scout Troop. The lot is open each day from 10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. The money they receive helps buy and maintain camping equipment, and helps pay the boys' way to summer camp. Buy your trees from a scout, and you will have contributed greatly.

The Midland Cooperative

Play School will hold its annual Christmas program on Thursday, December 21, at the Boy Scout Hall, at 9:30 a.m. All of the children of the Play School will participate in the program, with Mrs. Walter Challen, the Play School teacher, in charge. Hostesses will be the Mesdames Cameron Miner, George Sheppard, Jerome Houston, and David Tonneson. All mothers with children enrolled in the Play School are invited to attend.

Last week the children wrote letters to Santa Claus and then were taken to the Parkland Post Office to mail them.

The Midland Beavers 4H group held its meeting at the home of Kathy Craig, where she gave a demonstration on how to make bar cookies. They also made Christmas ornaments out of nut shells and sprayed them with silver paint. On Saturday, December 9th, they went to the Midland Library and cleaned and decorated it for Christmas. The next meeting will be held at the home of MaryEllen Casey, where she will give a demonstration on how to serve a buffet dinner.
