Loveland For Sale?

An epidemic of inquiries swamped the Times Journal early this week asking if Loveland Mutual officials were about to promote the sale of the community-owned power company to the City of Tacoma.

Secretary-treasurer Art Crate who said he knew of no immediate plan to submit such a proposal to the membership. He did concede however there had been some discussion with Tacoma.

The Mutual services a land area larger than the City of Tacoma and Parkland combined, and covers from Spanaway to the Nisqually and from Graham into the Eatonville area. Its assets include hundreds of miles of power lines feeding its service area.

Outlining the procedure for sale of a member-owned utility, Clifford Erdahl, Tacoma Public Utilities, told the Journal that such a proposal for sale must originate with the membership of the Mutual. After the majority of the membership have voted to sell the Mutual, the local board of directors must submit a proposal to us, he said. We then pass the proposal along to the Mayor and city council with our recommendations, and they make the final decision.

"I'm not going to try and mislead you," Erdahl said; "We have discussed the possibility of the sale with Loveland Mutual, but to my knowledge those discussions have not progressed beyond that stage." He indicated the negotiations have been underway for some time and expressed surprise that inquiries had not been made a long time ago.

The negotiations were said to have resulted from several of the Loveland board of directors expressing an interest in selling.

If such a plan is developing, it is not because the company is in any financial difficulty. "We have no financial problem," Crate told the Journal and added: "I wish I owned it."

Although he repeatedly denied a plan was being formulated to sell Loveland, of the talks with Tacoma Crate said, "If someone offered you enough money for your business, you might consider selling."

One informant, who declined to give his name for publication, charged that new service and memberships were being held up to those who might not vote favorably on a sale in an effort to gain a membership majority vote. "Some of us have waited as long as 8 months for a hook up and are being told that no new memberships are being issued because of a coming vote on the sale to Tacoma," he stated.

In response, Crate stated that he could recall one instance where a resident had to wait 8 months for a hookup, and that new memberships are being accepted. "The only delays in extending service that I know about are because of trailer courts requiring a special transformer or because of a few isolated right-of-way problems," he said. "We just can't go in and start clearing land for the right-of-way without permission from the landowner."

When asked what advantage might be gained by selling out to Tacoma Crate responded, "None that I can think of, none whatsoever." He said Tacoma has more men and equipment but added that he thought his people were doing a good job.

Greatest problem facing Loveland according to Crate is to secure sufficient electrical apparatus to meet the expanding demand of the area. His biggest headache is purchasing transformers and equipment to service large trailer courts. Westinghouse and General Electric are slow in filling our orders the manager stated, and sometimes the wait is for months.

STATE TROOPER Jim Gleason examines the cockpit of an experimental model of a light plane which missed the runway at Thun Field last Tuesday. The craft sheared off a wing and sustained damage to the fuselage and propellor as it plowed into a hillside and cut a swath through the trees. Pilot of the craft, registered to a Bob Hammer of Bellevue, sustained minor injuries.

112th and AINSWORTH, long a trouble spot in Pierce County traffic, claimed three more cars Tuesday as the above Pontiac sedan, pickup and small foreign sedan were involved in the same accident. The 1967 pickup was driven by Peter A. Grazer, 32, of 7509 Canyon Road East. The 1965 Pontiac was driven by Clara S. Johnston, 33, of 601 So. 7th and the small sedan by Adielene H. Lockhart, 51, of 4345 S. Birch.

PASSING ON A HILL resulted in this accident on 22nd Ave. East last week. The accident totaled a 1962 station wagon belonging to Rudi O. Suchbach, 36, of 2002 172nd St. East and severely damaged a 1953 pickup driven by Raymond C. Gish, 25, of 18721 32 Ave. East. Schuback sustained neck and eye injuries in the accident and Cliff Bawson, a passenger in the station wagon received a broken right arm. Gish had lacerations of the head and three Gish children received minor lacerations.

Special Summer Series At Parkway

Parkway Presbyterian Church, 714 East 138th Street, announces a special summer series of programs in addition to the regular worship services on Sunday mornings.

The first program takes place this Friday evening, July 11 at 7:30 p.m. and will feature the Sterling College Quartet of Sterling, Kansas. These young men who are students there are on a 10 week tour which will cover many states and include over 60 concerts. The program will include gospel music, folk songs, modern tunes, sacred music.

Seven other programs in the summer series will be presented and they will be as follows:

Wednesday - July 16 - The verbal testimony of six members and friends of Parkway concerning Christ At Work Today. They will relate what God means to them in today's world.

Thursday, July 24 - The Rev. Cyril A. Stevens, formerly of Oxford, England and now located in Lakewood. He has appeared before many service men and has an interesting message.

Wednesday, July 30 - The pastor, Rev. Wesley J. Drummond, will be in charge.

Wednesday, August 6 - Mr. Ron Hendry, Prosecuting Attorney for Pierce County will be present to tell of the youth problems in our area.

Wednesday, August 13 - Mrs. Masaharu Ano, A Japanese student at PLU will appear in native costume. Ano is a convert from Buddhism to Christianity and is now studying for his Master's Degree.

Wednesday, August 20 - Dr. Douglas Stave, former missionary to India and now a professor at PLU. He will show pictures of India depicting the beauty of the land as well as the dire poverty.

The final program on Wednesday, August 27, will feature the showing of the World Vision film No Greater Love. Released in January, 1969, this is a modern portrayal of events in Vietnam.

All programs are at 7:30 p.m. and each evening the nursery will be open to care for preschool children.

WOMEN'S WORLD

Linda Lawson Eslick Recent WSU Grad

Linda Lawson Eslick
Mrs. Linda J. Lawson Eslick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Lawson, Spanaway, graduated from Washington State University in Pullman June 8, 1969. She received a Bachelor of Arts degree in English and her Provisional Teaching Certificate. Mrs. Eslick will be working on her fifth year until the end of the first semester when her husband Bill receives his Electrical Engineering degree. They are working in Pullman on the Campus this summer.

Knock First - Then Enter
Dear Miss Brookfield:
My mother has become a problem. My husband is a graduate student, and when we got married eight months ago, my parents offered us a house they own, rent free, while my husband finished his studies. It seemed like a good idea at the time because money was tight for us and still is. The trouble is that my mother has a key to this house and she barges in, at all hours, uninvited. She refuses to knock, insisting that "we're all family." She is driving my husband wild. He says he now believes all those jokes about mothers-in-law. What can I do?
B.K., Santa Rosa, Calif.
Dear B.K.:
The housing offer could well have been made with the best of intentions but obviously emotional strings are attached, and they're tied to you. Talk to your mother without anger—and, if necessary, your father—to help her understand the wisdom of not using the key to invade your privacy. She too was a young bride once, so perhaps she can be made to realize the importance of the early years on the future of your marital happiness.

While you do not say so, I suspect you are an only child. If so, it may take an extra measure of tact and patience to help your mother understand that if you are old enough to marry, you are old enough to be treated as an adult. If all else fails, study your budget again. A new "landlord" may involve some sacrifice but it may well be worth the move.

Divorced At Fifty
Dear Miss Brookfield:
Is it possible to feel as if life is over at 50? I sit around staring at the four walls, feeling blue and depressed. About a month ago, my husband asked me for a divorce. He told me that for the last five years, there has been "another woman." Of course, she is much younger. I thought I had a good marriage so you can imagine my surprise. We have two children, both married. I was looking forward to the "second forty" years with my husband. What can you suggest?
D.S., Grand Rapids, Mich.
Dear D.S.:
You have to feel hopeful not to feel hopeless, and good health and activity will help. First, visit your physician for a check-up. Along with the news of the divorce, your depression may be aggravated by the psychological changes brought on by the menopausal and post-menopausal period. At such a time, the ovarian production of the hormone, estrogen, lessens. It is now possible to combat the effects of hormonal decrease with estrogen replacement therapy.

Next, start planning for the many years ahead. If it interests you, return to work; if you can afford to, take a trip. A change of scenery will do you the world of good. No, life does not end at 50. There's a big world out there, with plenty of challenges to keep you occupied and many people and children—in hospitals and foster homes—that need help. In helping others, you will be healing yourself. So, get busy.

No Mini-Skirts For The Mature

By Gloria Miller
New York (MW) — In the midst of the mini-skirt revolution, a designed offered the mature mother who's planning to go back to work some sage fashion advice. The woman over 40, she suggests, should look sensibly "with it" instead of slavishly following the "cute young looks" of her daughter's generation.

This advice came from Eleanor Brown, noted fashion designer and consultant to a number of firms in Canada and the United States. Mrs. Brown is a chic honey-blonde, and herself the mother of a 16-year-old daughter and an 18-year-old son.

Applying For a Job
She pointed out that a mature woman's dress and looks are crucial when she applies for a job. This is true, she said, not only in the "clothes-conscious" garment industry, but in every job situation. The woman who looks smart in an interview, she noted, "is a mile ahead" because the employer assumes she's a more experienced worker than she actually may be.

Mrs. Brown declared that physical health is as important as being chic. "Everything from posture to stamina is affected by the sense of well-being," she said. She also suggested that having a medical check-up is essential for women who plan to return to work. The family doctor, she said, can often advise a woman over 40 how to retain some of the vigor of youth, even though "she's not the miniskirted type any longer."

Acting Your Age
Mrs. Brown emphasized that, although it is the nature of the young to experiment with fashion, being "with it" doesn't mean the mature woman should follow suit. "Kids will try any new style, no matter how far out, and get away with it," but the mature woman, she noted, mustn't fall into the trap of pretending to be a teen-ager again. Apart from being inappropriately dressed, she said, working women can't afford to splurge their salaries on clothing "the way youngsters do."

The woman who has a job, a home and a family, Mrs. Brown said, doesn't have time to do much shopping. She recommended that the mature working woman seek clothes that look well and don't require too much maintenance. In this respect, she noted, fabric is as important as style, and attention should be given to finding "a good fabric" as well as a handsome design.

Mrs. Brown suggested that the mature woman select clothing that is smart, simple and personally becoming to her. The most ideal solution, she said, is a cross between "something fashionable and something very classic." That's the best formula she concluded, for acting your age and still being "with it."

Jeff Hill, 15, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Hill, 1202 129th St. S., claimed a new northwest marathon golf record this week at the College Golf Course, Pacific Lutheran University.

Hill completed 274 holes in 23 hours and 45 minutes, beginning Monday at 6 a.m., and finishing at 5:45 a.m. Tuesday.

The young Washington High School junior, who normally scores in the mid-80's over 18 holes, had a nine-hole best of 38 Monday and completed the daylight portion of the marathon with an 83 average.

After dark he used a putter only and his score skyrocketed. He was aided during the night by members of his family carrying flashlights to show him the way.

A member of the track and golf teams at Washington High, Hill said he trained for more than a week to prepare himself for the 24-hour grind. He estimated that he walked more than 60 miles during the marathon.

Young Hill was able to rest and eat with a minimum of lost time as his home is just off the 5th hole at the College Golf Course.

Motivating the young linker was the desire to be the first to set a record on behalf of the new Washington High School. Golf Digest record book lists 363 holes as the most played in a 24 hour period. But Jeff's super effort must go down as a record for high school play.

In addition to the Youth Activity Hi-Point Trophy donated by A.Q.H.A. the Horsemen's Benefit Association is also sponsoring an All-Around Youth Hi-Point Trophy to be awarded to the youth exhibitor accumulating the most points on Saturday and Sunday inclusive, in specified classes. There will also be High-Point Horse Trophy awarded based on points accumulated in classes on Saturday and Sunday, excluding Youth Activities and Halter. These last two awards will be presented Sunday at the end of the show.

The cooperation and assistance offered by many of the Tacoma area horsemen has been greatly appreciated. When you are going into a new area and a new type of show management many questions arise and an awareness that some things could have probably been done differently, but we are always open to suggestions for next year. We are hoping to be able to give all of you Quarterhorse Exhibitors a very "ROYAL" Welcome.

Further information may be obtained from Doris Vincent, Route 2, Box 364, Poulsbo, Wash. 98370, phone 779-2137.

are you losing interest?

Like so many other people these days, are you growing cautious about things you've always taken for granted in the past? Tired of worrying about what the "market will do tomorrow?" Wondering about what will happen next in our "roller coaster" economy? Sick of investing in so-called "blue chip" stocks that aren't bringing the income you'd hoped for? The chances are, you know, that many of the stocks you've invested in in years past don't pay as much as we do here at Citizens. Maybe that's why so many people are bringing their hard-earned money to us. They like earning more... and sleep better knowing their savings are insured by the Federal government. Why don't you?
