"Know ye your literature." Why? Because it broadens you, enlarges your perspective, gives you true culture; in a word, it lays a firm foundation for a sound education.

No one can ever call himself truly educated until he has tuned in on the thoughts of other Much as we cherish our pet ideas, they will always remain narrow and bigoted unless we add a little here and there in the way of sound cultural doctrine. Who are the most beloved among their contemporaries but those who have the most rounded and complete personalities? And such personalities can be attained only through contact with others. sonalities?

attained only through confuel with others.

Have you ever pondered the human understanding of Shakespeare? Have you even heard the organ music in the lines of Milton, or become convinced by the cloquent of Circero? Did you ever rejoice with Epictetus or play the stoic with Murcus Aurelius? Did you ever read a Moulton on The Literature of the Bible? Aren't we missing much that life could give us by failing to know such masters?

Do not rest content when you have seen a movie version of a great classic. In the cincatent content was action, not meditation, must predominate. The great thoughts, the deep thoughts, are usually missed.

The study of literature will result in much The study of literature will result in much buppiness for you. You will find yourself bound by neither time nor space; you will "sail the seven seas" and live a thousand lives; you will be independent of the sorry limitations of your own surroundings; in short, you will really live. And that's what we're here for after all, isu't it?

"College students produce two kinds of literature, neither of them good. Either they try revealing their own hearts, which are not very full, yet, and which they are generally unable to interpret, or they decide to initiate some well-known author in describing artificial situations which they know even less well than themselves." Vassar College's Pres. Henry N. MacCrucken short-circuits the literary lights. "We are what we are, not hecause of what we've been able to, squeeze out of the world, but because of what we've heen able to give back to the world. The University of Southern California's Dean of Public Administration, William B. Henley, tells us what's what about ourselves.

Need students be reminded again of the fact that it shouldn't be necessary to have a perpetual "Campus Day" on and about the grounds? So much is said of taking pride in one's campus; yet so little is done. Trile as this suggestion may be, it must needs be repeated. Keep in mind the fact that commencement deserves an attractive campus.—They neglect something that in itself is an asset to any school. The grounds here are charming. Keep them so!

Upper Classmen Putt! Putt! Putt! Take Frosh Nine Fore! Fore! Five! Whoa. Track

The upper classmen of Pacific Luitheran College maintained their su-premacy over the lowly Frosh by trouncing the under classmen, 17 to 9, in a softball gaine last Tuesday after-noon, May 11.

The Sophomores and Seniors united to form a ten-man team that was just a little too powerful for the Freshmen. The losers tried desperately to halt the powerful slugging of the victors mur-derous row with three twirlers, but all in vain. The upper classmen started out by scoring two runs in the first inning in which they took the lead and were never headed. Wiprud, Schmandt and G. Pflueger handled the pitching assignments for the Frosh with Haavik twirling for the Seniors and receiving credit for the win. Mc-Coy and Schmandt' with three runs apiece. Pflueger with two and Wiprud with one run, made up the total of the losers' scoring.

Results Received For Mantoux Tests

In the Mantoux test given here last week by the Tuberculosis League, of Pierce County it was found that 22% of the college enrollment showed a positive reaction to the test, and 18% positive reaction to the test, and 18% of the high school students received positive results. This is considered a good showing for so large a group, for the tendency is usually toward a higher resilities extinct. higher positive rating.

The tuberculin test is used for the urpose of finding out whether or not purpose of finding our whether or not there are tuberculosis germs in the body. It is approved by the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection by state and city health departments. tuberculosis sanatoria and scientific medical organizations. It was first used by Robert Koch, and has been in use for forty years.

The test is made by placing a drop of liquid called tuberculin within the upper surface layer of the skin either by a kiny scratch or by linjection. This is hakmless. If the spot becomes red and slightly swollen within two orthree days it means that tuberculosis germs are somewhere in the body. The small red reaction area disappears and leaves no scar or other effects.

Do not confuse tuberculin with "injections" or serums. Do not con-fuse tuberculin with BCG, the vaccine sometimes used for protecting infants born of tuberculosis mothers.

As a child grows up and his contacts with other persons increase, he is likely, sooner or later to get tuber-culosls germs into his body. Usuaily no harm is done because the number of germs is so small that the body fights back and keeps them from doing

In most cases tuberculosis begins very slowly in childhood and does not cause trouble until one is grown up.
It is well to know if a youngster has the germs in his body so that precau-tions may be taken to prevent serious trouble in later life. The tuberculin test gives this answer

A general idea of the number of children who react to the test may be gained from the experience of an east-ern state where more than 200,000 children have been given this test. These are the findings:

Of each 100 children between 5 and 15 years of age, an average of 26 reacted to the tuberculin test. Of these when examined by X-ray. 5 showed that some slight damage had been done but only about one of these five showed damage serious enough to require continued medical attention—

WHAT PRICE, MUSTACHE?

After having endured all manner of as a tin soldier! Not everyone can raise emarks about that fuzzy bunch which a mustache, and that is what gives it to wand then is permitted to collect its distinctiveness. With exercise and emarks about that fuzzy bunch which now and then is permitted to collect under my nose. I have found need to make a defense before that certain very critical group. I have tried to raise a mustache and I'm proud of it.

In the life of every young man there to things more majestic. There is that excited romantic feeling about everything that longs and seeks for some-thing different. This period is co-existent with college life, since at this age it expresses itself most predominantly. What height of fashion was It that saw no heed for garters, winter underwear, or a hat? None other than that created by college youth. Every-where the sentiment has been voiced. "Be collegiate," "show your sporting blood!" This wild spirit has pervaded our nation so deeply that it has be-come synonymous with the term American. And who could better por-tray the typical American young mar than the college student with his sleeked hair, raccoon coat, cigarette, and little mustache? Yes, a mustache— that characteristic which is a stamp of distinction, class, and fashlon upor anyone who is so fortunate as to pos

Many have agreed that the "muzzy" I have been fostering at various times has not come up to the fullest requirements. I realize that this product of eral long and tedlous weeks has not been satisfactory to the owner himself, and I am harrassed by such remarks as. "Jew forget twash? You missed a sparsely scattered hairs, if they might deserve that appellation, I fear that the Nebraska drouth has wrought its evil effects even here. Every morning for weeks at a time I have soaked the area with olive oil, and still so frail and colorless those fuzzy hairs stick in addition to this disappoint ent, there would be some who would embarrass me with their pronounced critical remarks. Some would say "What a foolish idea!" But dear readers, who could go so far to say that a mustache does not embellish and beautify the face? The distinct, sharply-cut lines; harmonizing with the deep features of the upper jaw, bring to light those hidden virtues of man. Beneath that "muzzy," no matter how abbreviated it may be, there is the sum total of the "he-man" displayed courage, endurance, and stateliness.

Ancient times considered whiskers a charm, and the use of the razor would charm, and the use of the razor would have been strictly forbidden. No man would allow himself to become so ef-feminate as to appear unahaven in public. But how gedly man has per-mitted hinself to degenerate; so that today he is satisfied to appear as smooth training one can become skilled in al-most anything, but in the matter of raising mustaches, we have but to thank our ancestors. What is this age coming to? With men following women in powdering their faces, manicuring their fingernails, and curling their hair? If you want to be a sissy, go and receive my compliments

But if you should be so unfortunate as I. who do not belong to that hairy group, you can at least pay your re-spects to antiquity by encouraging that little bit of fuzz that you do have. If thereby, you are influencing others to recognize and appreciate true manly beauty, and are stimulating the interest for bigger and better mustaches, then indeed you have not labored in vain. Perhaps those squeamish, yellow nairs have been injured by too frequent shaving. Give them a chance to stretch out and mature into long, black, virile hairs. And if you aren't at first suc-cessful, don't give up, but care for that "charley" just a little longer—the time will come. "The Black and Red"
