In books lie the soul of the past . . .
The articulate audible voice of the past, when the body and material substance
of it has altogether vanished like a dream.

We will miss his friendship and presence.

Mayfest:

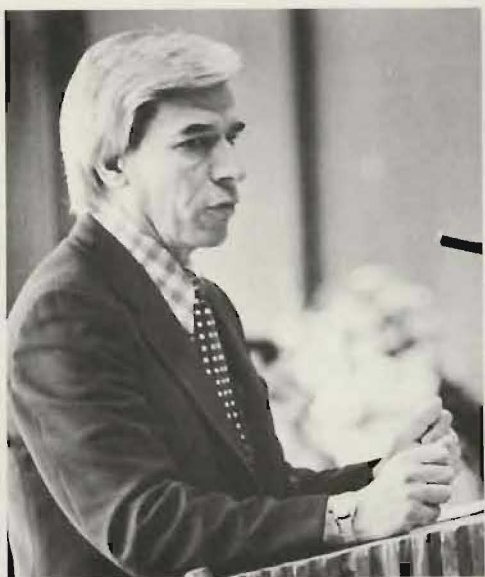

“We’d Like to Teach the World to Dance”

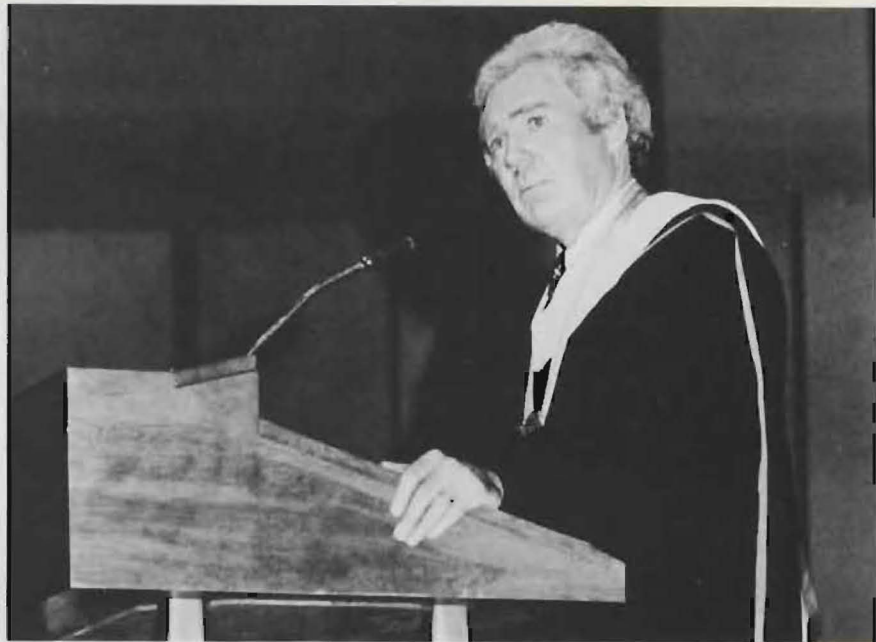

Nurses Capping: "Reach Out and Touch"

Nurses Pinning: "Threshold of a Dream"

One Day in May . . .

Hello, world . . .

*We've been here
quite awhile.*

*We've done a lot
to make it . . .*

and had some fun along the way.

While some still wonder where to go . . .

many of us have found our place . . .

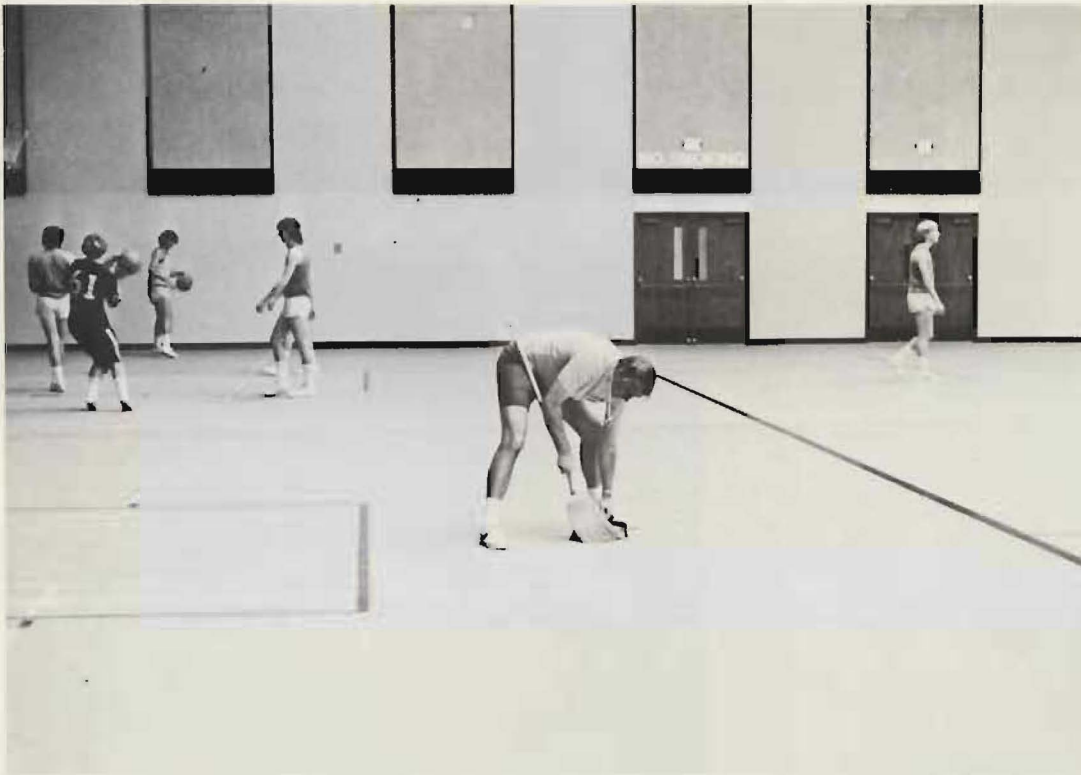

after moving obstacles from our path . . .

we touched the goals we were reaching for.

We did our best in everything we could . . .

and hopefully, left something worthwhile behind.

How good it is

We were certain we would find all we sought . . .

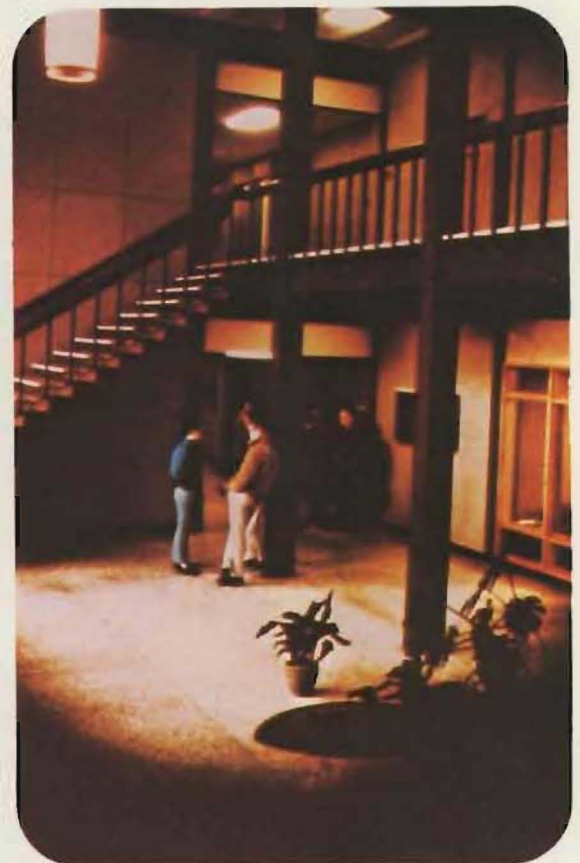

but suddenly, the diversions came . . .

there was somewhere to go . . .

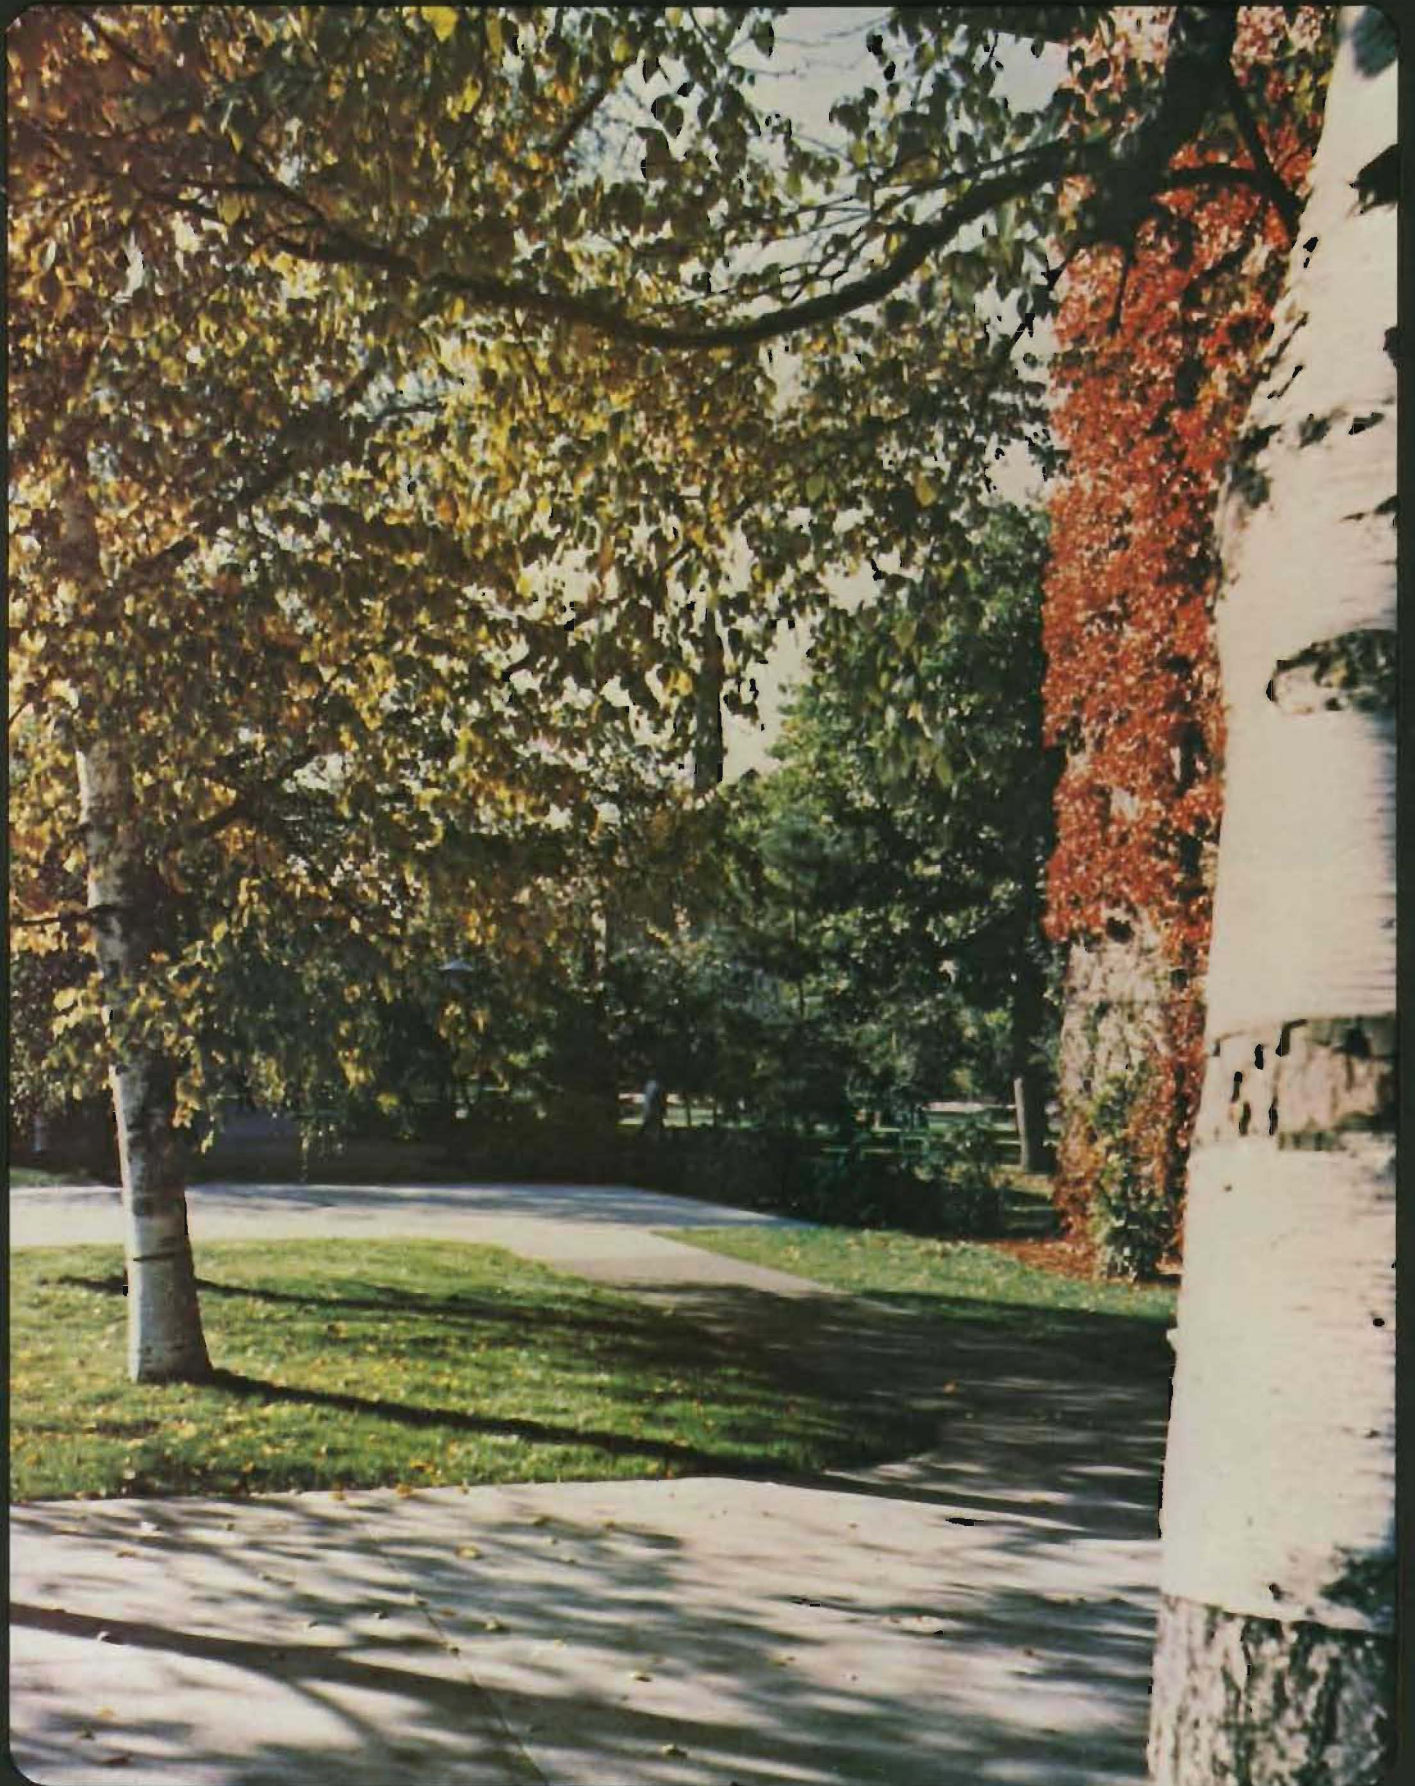

or someone to see . . .

or something to do.

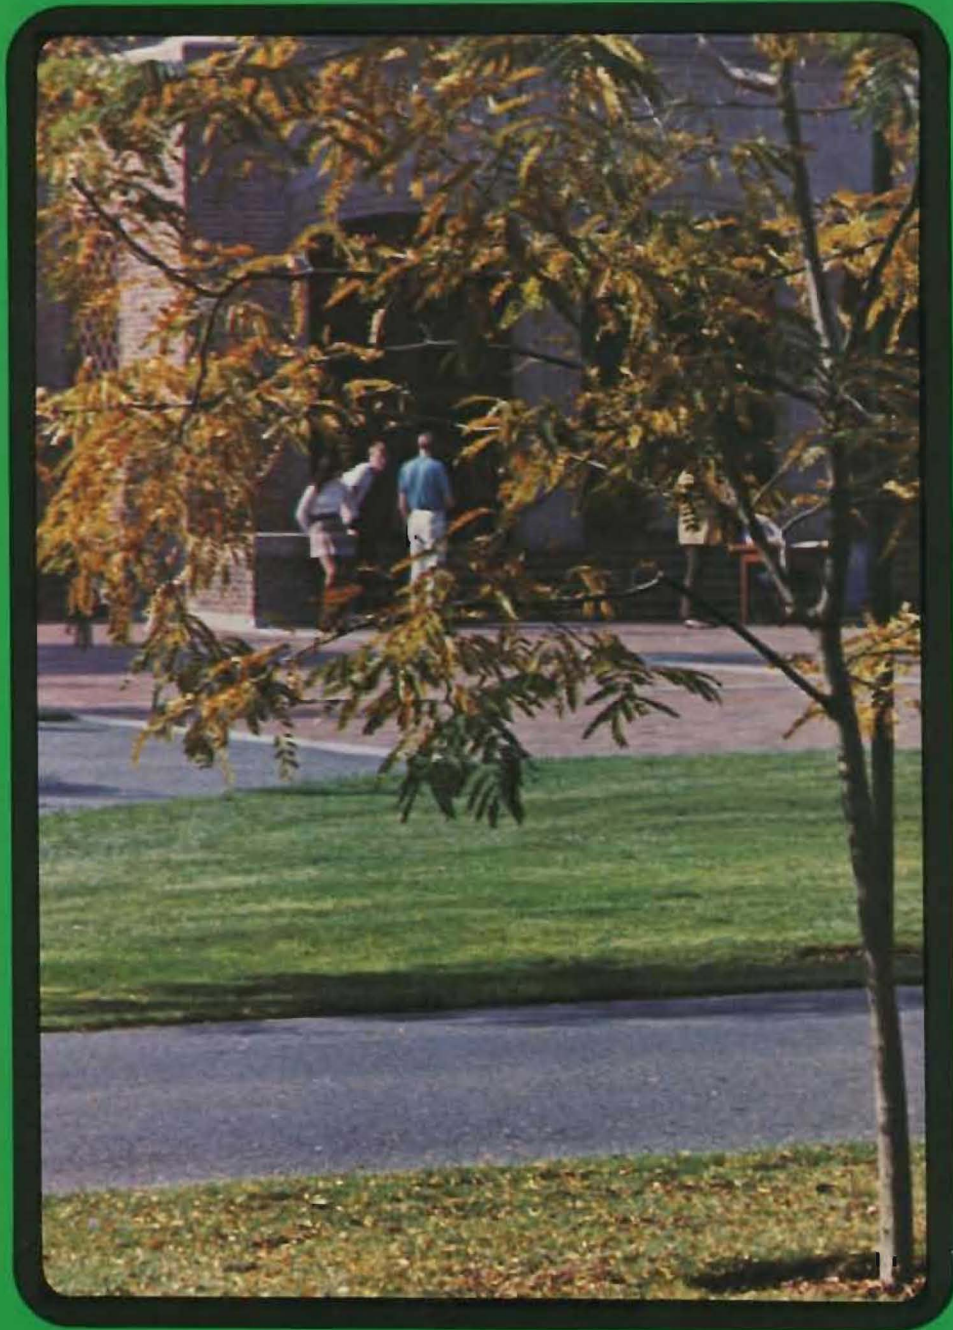

Seasons came . . .

and went . . .

leaving us to begin anew.

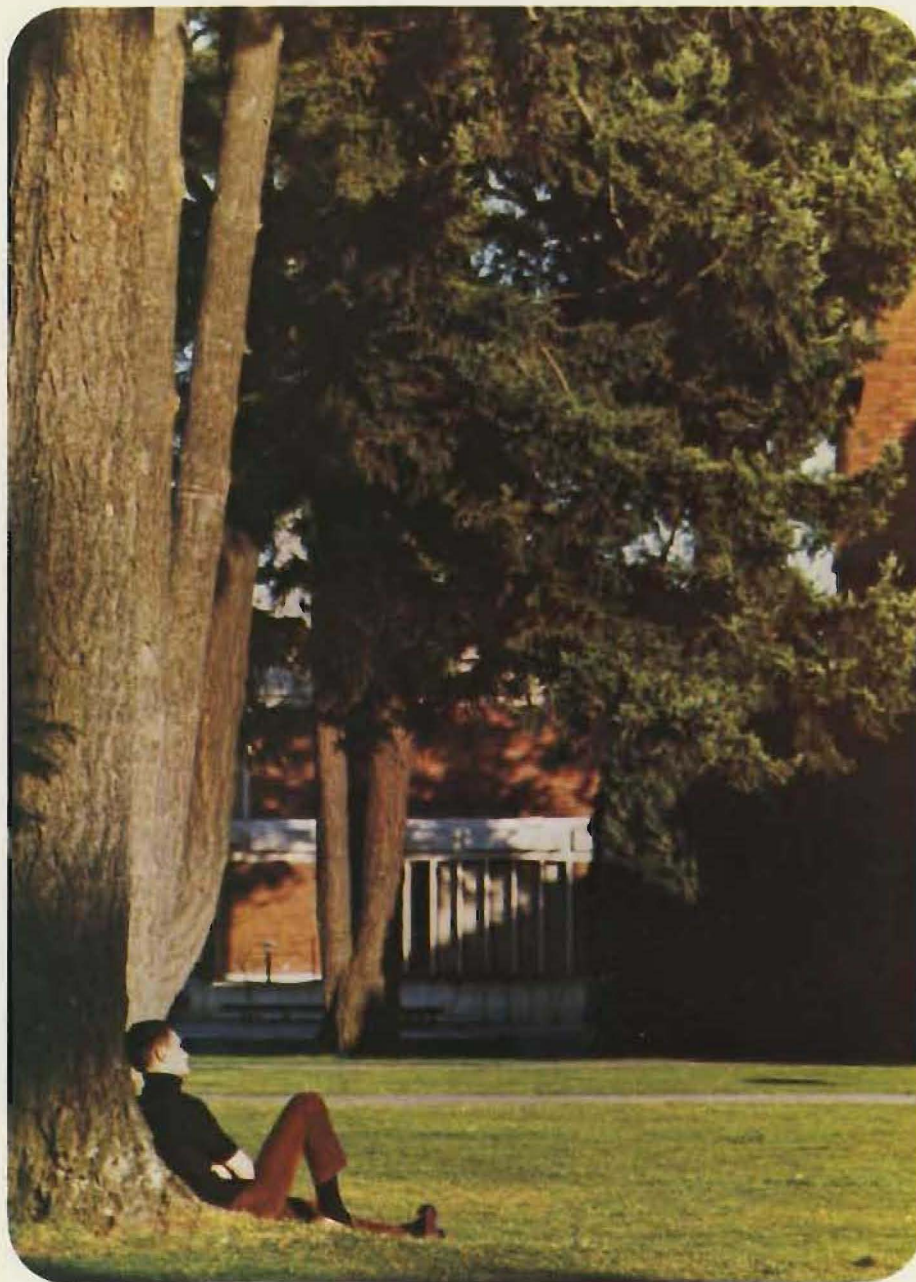

Some of us searched for things

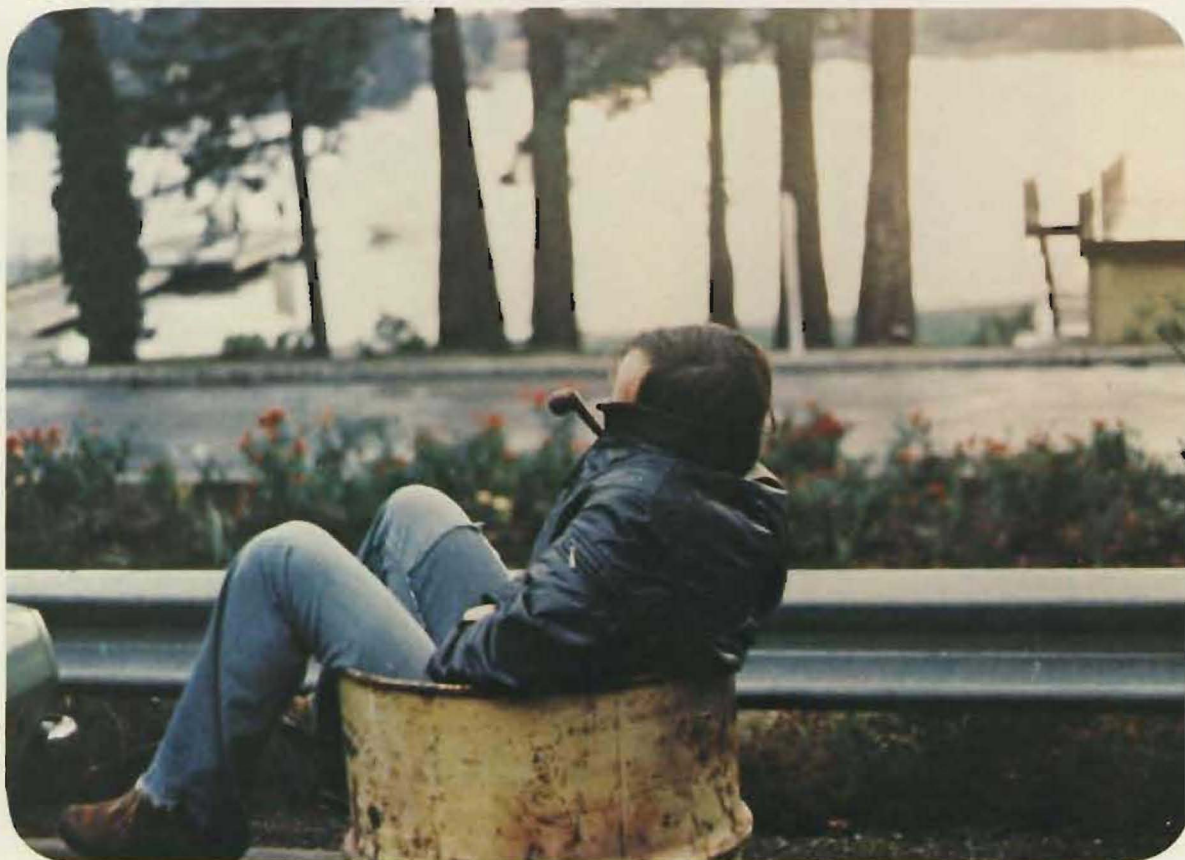

others had found . . .

while some were content to languish in their complacency . . .

frequently not bothering to care.

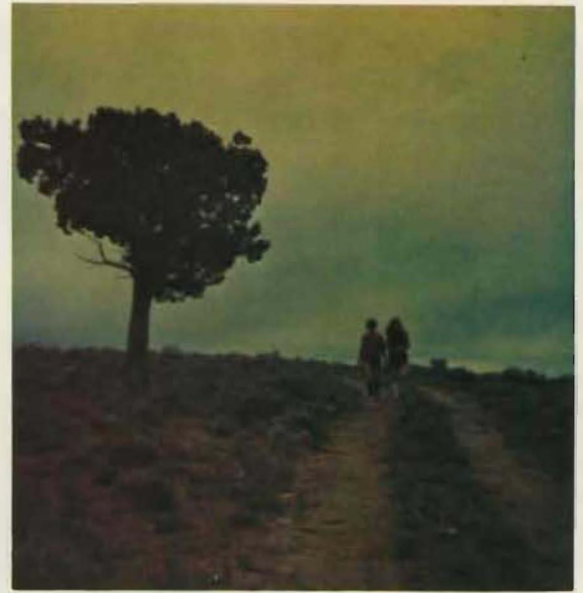

Fortunately, somewhere, the promise we thought we had still exists.

There are many people who deserve special credit for making this yearbook a reality — the Staff, Randy Mahoney, the Bert Perler Studio and Gail Habegger.

But without the frequent good advice and counsel of Brad Munn, the extraordinary assistance of Mike Penney of the Taylor Publishing Company, and most of all, the constant devotion and photographic excellence of Darel Roa and Ken Dunmire, there would not have been a Saga 1974.

Gratelully
