

Kansas City, The Lutes Are Coming!

The Pacific Lutheran University basketball team winds up preparations this week for what has almost become an annual trek to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) Basketball Tournament in Kansas City, Missouri.

The Knights, who will depart by commercial airlines Sunday at 7 a.m. from Seattle-Tacoma Airport, will be making their eighth appearance—seventh in the last nine years—in the national finals.

PLU, the regular season Evergreen Conference champion, won the right to represent District I in the NAIA championships by sweeping a best-of-three playoff series from Western Washington, the Evergreen Conference Tournament winner. The Knights stopped the Vikings 59-44 and 81-58 last Friday and Saturday on their home court.

The Knights will carry their best record since the days the famed "Big Three" of Chuck Curtis, Jim VanBerk and Roger Iverson were roaming the hardwood for PLU into the tournament. They own a 19-6 record, including victories in all 10 conference games.

Despite their regularity in the NAIA tournament, the Knights have yet to come up with a winner. A second place finish in 1959 and a third place spot in 1957 are the closest they have come to earning the national crown. In seven previous appearances at Kansas City, PLU has posted a 10-7 record.

Last year the men of Coach Gene Lundgaard were ousted in their first start by Rockhurst, 83-77.

SONGLEADER PAM GARRETT is caught during a mad outburst of enthusiasm at last weekend's play-off games with Western. Actually, Pam's yelling paid off, for the lutes are on their way to Kansas City.

High-scoring Tom Whalen set a new PLU season record for field goals scored during last weekend's playoff action. The 6-6 senior from West Seattle dropped 13 field goals through the hoop to bring his season total to 237. The old mark of 223 was set by Chuck Curtis during the 1957-58 season.

Whalen is averaging 23.7 points per game, scoring 593 in 25 outings—a personal high.

Three other Knights are scoring in the double figures. Sophomore ace Curt Gammell follows with an 11.6 average while Gus Kravos and Moen Fredrickson have respective averages of 10.4 and 10.0. Max Albertsson, the 6-8 senior from Sweden, is a shade under the twin figure mark with a 9.8 average.

PLU will carry a ten-man squad to Kansas City. Lundgaard will select the traveling unit from Whalen, Gammell, Kravos, Fredrickson, Albertsson, Jon Malmix, Mark Anderson, Mike Lockard, Mike Kelly, Tom Lotentzen, Tom Shewey and Ken Hartvigson.

It is still uncertain as to whether Fredrickson will make the trip. The 6-0 senior guard injured his knee in the semi-finals of the Evergreen Conference Tournament and didn't suit up for last week's playoff games. His spot in the starting lineup was taken by freshman Mark Anderson, who responded with a stellar performance. He made nine steals during the two outings in sparking the Knights to two of their best defensive showings of the year.

Drawings for the NAIA tournament are expected to be held Saturday.

GOP'ers Leave for Spokane

By Dennis Struere
Staff Copy Editor

Twenty PLU'ers left for the Washington State Young Republican Convention in Spokane, which begins this evening with registration and committee meetings. Tomorrow many state-wide offices will be up for election at the main convention meeting.

The executive board of PLU's YR club appointed the following as delegates: Andy Omala, Audrey Arnet, Ben Braaten, Roger Claridge, Earl Gerheim, Joan Haakenson, Arrelang, Dick Rushing and Sandy Tillman. All credits are Bill Chapman, Duvid Elberg, Bob Erickson, Dennis Howard, Howard Lang, Jim McE and Al Orentlich.

Jim Petche, Betty Olson, Coaly Rettkowski, Sharon Stratton and Francis Winn are attending as observers.

The following also possible candidates for the Republican nomination for governor of Washington will be speaking at some time during the convention: Richard Christiansen, Don Evans and Joe Gaudin. Congressman William Steiner will speak at the banquet tomorrow evening.

Observers as well as alternates and delegates will be allowed to attend a variety of workshops.

Some of the workshop topics and their speakers include: "Public Relations and News Media," by John Lemmon, political writer; "Your Role in Creating a Winning Campaign," by William Mohnike, Multnomah, Ore., county chairman; "Untapped Resources," by Art Klein, president of Executive Management, Inc.; "Filling Vacancies in the Precincts," by William Walters, state chairman for the Republican party; and "Representative Government," by Mr. Lloyd Eichenhower.

The emphasis of the YR convention will be upon practical politics for winning the election. Young Republicans include one city college club but also many organizations with members up to age 21.

PLU delegates held a pre-convention caucus last Saturday with the University of Puget Sound, Pierce County and Olympic Jubilee College delegations. Eric Hjelmervik, PLU member, is the chairman of this district's delegations.

Recently PLU's YR club has been helping Dr. Earl Gerheim, advisor to the club and a precinct chairman, canvass the Portland area to be sure all those eligible are registered to vote.

Young Republicans are 110 strong at PLU, and more support is anticipated upon the enthusiastic return of their delegation to Spokane.

Banquet Honors Top Sophomores

Speaking on the topic, "The Importance of Graduate Work in the Modern World," Dr. James Bethel, associate dean of graduate school at the University of Washington, will address 75 students of the annual Sophomore Honor Banquet March 12 at 6 p.m. in Chris Knutsen.

"The aim of the banquet is to encourage sophomores who are undecided about going on to graduate work," stated Dr. John Kuecher, one of the members of the faculty committee in charge of the banquet. Other faculty members on this committee include Dr. Herbert Kusano and Dr. Charles Anderson.

All expenses will be paid for by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, which was established to promote graduate work toward college teaching. All sophomores attending must have a grade point average of 2.8 or over.

Construction to Begin On Pool and Dormitory

By Gary Habeldash
Staff Writer

Scale models of two proposed fall additions to the PLU campus will be on display in the administration building within the next two weeks. The two buildings, both to be situated on lower campus, will be a new men's dormitory and an Olympic-size swimming pool.

The university is presently selecting architects for the new additions, which are part of the first phase of the new $16.5 million development program, and work on the swimming pool is scheduled to begin shortly. The pool will be completed the latter part of this year.

Ballet Company To Be Featured For Artist Series

The Pacific Ballet Company, which will appear in Le Grand Chapelle Friday, March 13, at 8:15 p.m. in the last Actis Series presentation of the year, has received unanimous rave reviews in its concert engagements.

Pacific Ballet will present productions from its repertoire of classical, traditional and original works. The dramatic ballet, its demanding nature has proved to be the concentrated study of the compact concert group, will be featured.

Alan Howard, director and leading dancer of Pacific Ballet, has amassed one of the world's most comprehensive collections of books on the ballet. Wherever he has performed, here and abroad, Howard takes time out to search for more reference books on the dance. His collection includes books written in ten different languages.

In addition to starring with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, Alan Howard has danced at the New York City Ballet, the Metropolitan Opera and Radio City Music Hall.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Gian Carlo Menotti, Romero Casarino, Tchaikowsky and Alexander Glasunov will be heard.

The swimming pool will be adjacent to the present gymnasium and is the first of three athletic buildings to be constructed. It will be built in the shape of an "L." This will allow for competition swimming in one segment and a diving area in the other.

PLU students have raised over $100,000 toward the construction of this pool. When the fund was first started it was believed that $100,000 would be an adequate amount for the proposed swimming facilities. However, when this amount was reached last semester, it was discovered that an additional $50,000 was needed.

Rather than wait any longer for the construction to begin, it was decided to secure loans for the additional amount. Students will continue to contribute a $4 per semester swimming pool construction fee until the loan is paid.

Total cost of the pool is estimated at $190,000. Students will contribute until the $150,000 mark is reached. The additional $40,000 will be supplied by the university as a part of the athletic complex budget.

The new dormitory will house 200 men and will be the first of four new dorms financed through a federal government loan. It will be located on lower campus bordered by Clover Creek on one end and the west wing of Pflieger Hall on the other.

Building is scheduled to begin on the dormitory Sept. 1 of this year. It is dated for occupancy in the fall of '85.

H.S. Students Here for Plays

This weekend PLU offers two to twenty groups of high school performers. This time instead of debaters, vocalists are here to participate in the annual One-Act Play Festival. The competition is sponsored by the PLU chapter of Alpha Psi Omega, national dramatic fraternity.

Twenty Washington high schools have entered the festival which enables high school dramatists to engage in a competitive experience. After they perform, their efforts are evaluated.

Each presentation is within a 20-35 minute time span. All performances will be held in CB-200 and will be presented in the round. Competition begins at 10 a.m. this morning and will run through the evening hours. The festival will end with the presentation of awards tomorrow evening.

Priscilla Bjork is chairman of the event. Judges include Alan Dreyer, Bill Robb, Arden Flonjod, Blair Mersch, Catherine and Todd Duester, instructor of speech, and Stanley Elberson, chairman of theater at PLU.

The competition will be open to the public and students are invited to attend.

Daffodil Float Expense Questioned

When they vote on the daffodil float allocation next Monday night, the ASPLU legislators will have the opportunity to prove their worth in the student body.

In past years it has been the custom to improve Tacoma residents by erecting a colorful daffodil-covered float in the community parade. For this occasion students would fork over something over $400.

A close vote at last week's meetings favored reducing the amount of these funds again this year until student opinion could be measured.

And many students certainly do have an opinion on this matter. With good cause the question has been raised, "Just what good does this float do for PLU?"

Those who advocate the spending of this money are quick to point out the public relations value of such a venture. Last year the whole community became acquainted with the Lutheran ordinance of confirmation when the float portrayed a mock scene of a confirmation rite. PLU was thus immediately labeled as a Christian school with Christian ideals.

But this type of reasoning must not be pushed too far. It is indeed questionable how many people actually get a better image of the university from observing a small yellow float travel by street for a few seconds.

In the midst of many $400 could be better used to promote the goals of the university.

The Leveled Race

By Louis T. Rochele

The latest attempt of France's President Charles De Gaulle to regain grandeur for his second-class nation was carried out in the finest tradition of nineteenth century imperialism. The scene was the independent African state of Gabon, and the event was De Gaulle's restoration of its second President, Leon Mba.

Mba was deposed in a sudden coup and after his attempt to create a one-party state. His political opponents, backed by the Gabonese army, captured Mba and gained control of his government before he had time to make his way to his place in a chair of state and therefore no time to call on French assistance in passing down the sword.

De Gaulle nevertheless moved swiftly against the new government. In less than two days French paratroopers, who were flown into Gabon, destroyed the new government and restored the ousted Mba. To justify his action De Gaulle invoked a 1960 Franco-Gabonese neutrality defense agreement. But his action can only be viewed as an act of armed intervention to the national interest of an independent sovereign state.

This aggressive act can do nothing for the welfare of Gabon. Mba, who will probably get his one-party state through a program of suppression which he has indicated will come, will be seen by Africans as the stooge of De Gaulle. Their disenchantment with Mba will be their disenchantment with De Gaulle and France.

De Gaulle's unilateral action destroyed a basic tenet of the sovereign state. The truly sovereign state has full authority over its own internal affairs.

France wants her friend Mba to power so she can continue to make use of Gabon's rich natural resources. But her recent action makes a mockery of Gabon's independence. She used an old tactic which will not be tolerated in the new Africa.

Athletic Changes Suggested

by James Cyfert

Dr. Robert Mortved's recent explanation of the increase in fees and his review of future trends in this area was in some ways a enlightening (libby. His personal advice to "express about an education" is not to be taken lightly. One man of color that stands out to be taken lightly by the student body is that of intercollegiate athletics.

Annually the 3-5 individuals wearing black and gold and competing with other universities consume over $50,000 and return only $17,910. The $32,500 loss is paid by the students.

Is each student individually gaining sufficient return from his investment to merit continuation of the program in its present form? If intercollegiate athletics is approached as being beneficial only to those who directly participate the question becomes ridiculous. No individual student is worth an annual extracurricular expense of $195.

Apparently the university and student body feel the need of intercollegiate athletics is justified. If their present program is to be continued.

Why is one part of the athletic program involving 30 or 35 individuals annually successful while the other part is a failure? It is difficult to establish a 50-50 record of success and failure as it is not clear to understand how our case can almost yearly attract national tournaments while the track team lacks uniforms and running shoes, the football team lacks a coach whose pi-every interest is football and the football team lacks enough players and equipment to survive a season with any semblance of a team.

If we can produce outstanding teams in one area it should be a help to the other areas. Failure in the other areas due to poor organization of funds, coaches and community support.

Is there a good reason why all athletic events and teams should not receive equal financial aid would support from the University and student body? Financial support in this case should be based on the number of students participating and equal support based on personal preference.

It doesn't make sense to advertise a product which is unsuccessful. For proof one need only look at the empty stands at our football and basketball games. In fact, we could save $15,000 per year for this year's basketball tournament play-off. Why, less we show the only way to make the expense of athletics worthwhile is to have a well-developed, well-supported program in which everyone who is desired has an equal chance at competition.

If this requires redistributing the existing money or even spending more, then it should be done. If the student body wants athletics it should support all athletes. If it doesn't feel the expense is worth the cost it should reduce or cancel all sports. The university in drop athletics. Higher standards would be a improvement over the way that now exist.

Herr Purvis Relates Life in Germany

by Joseph LaRue

This year PLU has added to the German department an instructor who has supplemented his schooling with a personal acquaintance of the German people.

Howard Purvis, instructor in German, spent the year August, 1962, to August, 1963, teaching English in Westphalen, Germany.

Because he lived in a district with the German culture twenty-four hours a day.

Discussing the German school Purvis said that the atmosphere of student-teacher relationships was one of greater contrasts than that of the United States. The classroom atmosphere is still and formal and the teacher and student hold a competi-live attitude toward each other.

When teachers come to school each day and see their associates, they greet them formally and shake hands. They never use first names.

to discuss how many times friends talk to outside of the school.

The student who is late in class must interrupt the lecture, apologize to the teacher, and perhaps shake hands with him before taking his seat.

In the non-academic situation student-teacher relationships are much more casual, Purvis reports. Students will gather in small groups for a walk or visit and have discussions with their teachers on an equal basis. Students also visit teachers at the instructor's home and go on hikes with him.

The people in Germany have learned to live with the partition of their country. On June 17 they have a holiday which is a rather solemn occasion with political speeches by prominent political figures and parades for those like East.

Perhaps it affects the West German less because they can visit the East. But they are curious and almost everyone knows someone who is a refugee and came across just before the wall was raised.

Even the Germans in the international class hold some misconceptions about the United States. The German's impression is based on the U. S. comes from American soldiers and tourists.

There is a nice misconception that the United States is a land of unbridled capitalism, racketeers and men of the Al Capone variety. They feel the American woman dominates both home life and the social-political scene. Purvis added laughingly.

MISSED!

by Bob Anderson

It has now been exactly a week since the high school debater introduced the motion. The thesis is quite on the contrary. The thesis is that the best defense of a B is that you are in the opinion of majority, high school style—found between deep drags on her leg to be blowing bubble gum type bubbles. That combination is pretty hard to beat.

Now who is more to be despised—the Pharisees, Saducers, tax collectors, or meat ticket checkers? (Just kidding).

Remember the cheap speaker who talked about the future of the campus deciding to stop smoking at PLU? And that he had been going on right under their noses? Well, it must have worked because since they caught on he hasn't been seen for a while.

An old proverb says your bread upon the water, for the ducks will be headed south before many days. Star Inn Dept. (This goes to be Basketball and football players have the lowest grades.

Athletes participate in more religious groups and more campus activities, hold more offices in campus organizations and work at more part-time jobs than non-athletes.

Junior Varsity Finishes Play

by Mike Macdonald

"This has been the finest junior varsity squad I have ever seen at Pacific Lutheran." These were the words of praise that Mark Salzman, PLU athletic director and JV coach, had for his team. Finishing 23 points the JV's won 30 while losing one, a very fine record considering the competition they faced over the season.

The main purpose of a junior varsity team is to develop future varsity players and this purpose was surely achieved this season, in fact there were many cases this year when JV members were called on not only to act as reserves for the varsity but were given starting assignments. Both Mark Anderson and Tom Lorenz were given starting jobs for several games.

The power of this team can readily be seen in the fact that they scored over 100 points in eight of 11 games and had an overall average scoring average of 84.3 points a game. Tom Lorenz, the outstanding freshman from Lewis and Clark of Spokane, was the leading scorer of the team with a 19.9 average per game. He was followed by Tom Sherry with a 15.3 average and Al Hedman with a 10.7 average.

Even though the Knights varsity team will lose four starters through graduation, one can hardly say the future looks dim with such fine caliber as this year's JV team. Fans can look for big things from both Tom Sherry and Tom Lorenz in the next three years; they are both strong rebounders and excellent shot.

The team improved players on the team would have to be Skip Hartvigson. If he continues to improve the way he has the past two years he will definitely be a big value to head coach Gene Lundquist. There isn't much left to mention about ball player although one would not have to look very hard to find good things to say about each one.

The junior varsity and their coach, Mark Salzman, had a fine year, representing PLU very well, but more important have made the basketball States here look very bright.

Track Team Has Potential

by Jay Smith

With two excellent possibilities of winning a national championship in the high jump and the javelin, the PLU track team is making forward to an outstanding season. This year's team has all the potential of becoming the best ever to PLU's history. With the exception of the pole vault and the triple jump, there is expertise in every event.

Two years ago, PLU, led by Hans Albertson, scored its highest number of points in the Evergreen Conference Track Championships. With the return of Albertson and the addition of another "Torch" the chances should be very high to repeat again.

During this season "big blue" jumped 6'10 1/2", won the conference title, and also the NAIA high jump crown. Last year the conference title was won by Curt Gammell, making this year PLU all the way. In the javelin the team are led by Vernon Lagrove from Sweden who has thrown 290 feet, which would have ranked him sixth at month among all collegians last year.

Other strength will come from Les Seckler in the 100 and 220 yard dashes. He is a junior quarter who has had some exceptional times in the past, including a 49.6 sec. 100. Bobbed back in the 220 there he's one more, among some freshmen can prove themselves.

In the 100, the team have their usual strong back, with Bob Sanders, Mike Macdonald and Gordon Brown. These three will give PLU a strong relay team capable of taking the conference, which the team have been close to winning the past two years.

Terry Brown, conference champ in the 800, will be back. Last year he and Chuck Sorkvik finished first and third in the conference, with Brown coming in at 1:56.2, for a school record. Sorkvik is out this season because of injury.

The distances will see John Hanson and Jay Smith attempting the mile and three-mile. Due to lack of depth at these distances, both will probably have to double back next year.

In the field events, besides the high jump and the javelin, the team are quite strong. Chris Egan throws the shot and discus, and has approached the school record in the shot. He is backed up by Larry Stevens and Dave Wall. The hammer is a 140 pounds to the team.

Since this is an Olympic year, a few changes have been made in the track and field events. The three mile will be run more frequently, and in all championship meets, instead of the one mile. The eight jump (hop-step-and-jump) and 330 yard intermediate hurdles will replace the 220 yard low hurdles.

Knights Take NAIA Playoff From Western

Pacific Lutheran University Knights will make what almost has become an annual trip to Kansas City again this year.

The Knights took care of their last Saturday night win when they downed the defensive Western Washington Vikings 81-58. This gave them a clean sweep of the district playoff with two straight victories. Friday night's game with the Lakers was 99-44.

First Local College Crew Team Started

University of Puget Sound has organized Tacoma's first college crew team. This is the first time in Tacoma that a crew team will be coached by students of a university or college.

Many of the men training and for crew have never rowed in a crew shell and the team will be coaching them through. They are having trouble getting enough men to fill two shells and they would like to have any PLU men who are interested.

The National Guard has given the unarmen some money and a donation of American Lake. The boat rowing much to be fixed up but this is all going to be done by the crew. American Lake was chosen as the rowing venue because of the well-form water conditions. The Green Lake Rowing Club of Seattle has donated two racing shells.

Paul Meyer, a consulting engineer at Seattle, will coach the crew. Meyer, an experienced oarsman, rowed for the University of Washington team which won at the Olympic Games in the 1930's. He is going to coach the team without a salary because of his interest in crew and young people.

Anyone who is interested in rowing for this team should contact John McDonald at 56-5908. They need men who will be willing to row in condition and make all the practice sessions.

The Lakers jumped off to an early lead against the Vikings and kept it throughout the game. Tom Whalen, Curt Gammell and Jan Malin with part of most of the scoring and rebounding.

The Lakers led 24-23 at the half-way mark and the Vikings were never able to score more than four points during the game.

Whalen was the big scorer with 21 points even though he did not make much of the game because of foul. But Curt Gammell and Jan Malin picked up where Whalen left off and scored 12 points, and 16 points, respectively.

PLU came up with some hot shooting, making 50 of 60 shots from the field for an even 50 percent. Western was cold, hitting only 20 of 69. Their lower shooting percentage was mainly due to the good defense of the Lakers.

The Lakers also led in the rebound department, pulling down 36 to Western's 45. Gammell led in rebounds with 14 and Malin pulled in 8.

The last five minutes of the game was climaxed by the PLU rep team which began playing "Kansas City" and the team started chanting "Kansas City, here we come!"

Museum of Natural History Is Science Dept. Attraction

by Sharon Larson, Staff Features Writer

"What do you do with 300 pounds of frog's meat?" This is one of the less colorful problems faced by the Museum of Natural History at PLU. The museum, located on the second floor of the science building, has acquired collections donated by students, graduate and faculty but never before. The museum is in its founding stage at present, though plans are visualized for the future by the director, Dr. Jean Knudsen, associate professor of biology.

The collections are primarily used to demonstrate species found in the Northwest. Worldwide specimens are gathered when it is possible to demonstrate unique morphological adaptations of both plants and animals. The collections are available to high schools in the Tacoma area. Its primary use is in the science classes at PLU with local students doing research in their fields of interest.

Maxine Carr, a junior, is actively involved in a study of plants under the guidance of Roger Gullford, instructor in biology. Loretta Logan, a senior, mounts and catalogs mammals and fishes. Bill Peterson, a senior, collected fishes and coral during his recent stay in Hawaii. The mounting of birds is being accomplished by David Pearson, a freshman, with Dr. Barton Osterman's assistance.

Graduates of PLU have recently contributed to the work. Ron Heyer and Dick McGinnis, doing graduate work at the University of Southern California, have sent collections of fishes gathered from ocean depths of over one-half mile. David Wake, soon to begin teaching at the University of Chicago, contributed reptiles and amphibians to the work.

Dr. Vern Newhouse, a 1952 graduate of PLU and currently with the U. S. Public Health, recently donated 2456 parasitic flies to the collections. Dr. Knudsen cites the quality of this contribution as "a real boon to the museum." Winona Knudsen, a 1954 graduate, is currently collecting and mounting butterflies of the Northwest. Don Pattle, a biology teacher at Keithley Junior high school, is an active collector of birds and mammals for the museum.

Exchanges with other institutions have given the school specimens not available in this area. Flint College in Michigan, the University of Costa Rica, Oklahoma State University and the University of Queensland in Australia have all sent insects. In the exchange Dr. Knudsen has recently identified 960 specimens of the tiger beetle for the University of Washington.

Field collectors are active in areas not available to local students. Specimens arrive from Puerto Rico. Leilani Marsh has sent specimens from Africa; and David Lee, a PLU junior, will soon begin sending collections from New Zealand. Dr. Knudsen asks that students who might be visiting in tropical areas volunteer to collect. He assures that the techniques are simple, and the museum is in need of examples of animals showing special adaptations from these areas.

And Museum David Pearson at Work

Many unusual donations were made this year. From Westport, Wash., came a 138-pound sea turtle. This is a 34-inch alligator was also donated, and Don Pattle created the lion's meat problem with his gift of a 340-pound African lion.

DR. JENS KNUDSEN displays a highly-poisonous snake from Costa Rica. There is nothing to worry about, however, for the snake is simply one of thousands of "preserved" specimens in the PLU Museum of Natural History.

Clippings Prepared For Distribution

As the meeting held recently in Minneapolis of the American Lutheran Church with college student body presidents and conference moderators, new plans were revealed for the college's College Clippings publication.

Clippings is the periodic publication of reprinted articles from various student newspapers. It is edited this year by PLU senior Mark Lane.

Lane reports there will be one issue this year, and that the Youth Department of the ALC will subsidize the printing of copies for all 13,000 students in the church's twelve colleges.

The format this spring will be that of a eight page magazine. The presidents changed the name of the magazine to Dimensions 12.

College Clippings has only been distributed in small numbers through the Youth Department of the ALC.

PLU Debators Finish Season

The traveling squad was awarded as Tim Browning and Jerry Macchione, Andy Ellington and Rock Elio as the two most worthy. Junior members are Linda Foss, Deanna Zimbelman, Lynn Still, LaVon Holdco, Roger Swenson, Jay Macdonald and Sue Moen.

TO THE POINT.

"KJR" D. J. To Discuss Beatles
Lan Roberts, radio disc jockey, will appear on KPLU's "Knights" Mar. 11 under the direction of Paul Holstrom, student producer.

Roberts, who is appearing through the courtesy of Seattle's KJR radio station, will comment on the recent influx of English vocal groups. "The Beatles" in particular will be discussed. Hope Halverson will emcee the program as student hostess.

Pianists to Appear on University In Profile
The "University In Profile" series will present a piano concert tomorrow. The program will be presented on KINTV-TV, channel 11, at 5 p.m. Piano selections by Mary Gilchrist, Susan McGee and Formation Win will be presented.

Flower Drum Song and Gigi at Campus Movies
Tonight the Campus Movies will present "Flower Drum Song" in color. The film, starring Nancy Kwan, James Shigeta and Moway Umechi, features music of Rodgers and Hammerstein's greatest songs, and will play at 7 and 9:30 p.m.

Saturday night another color movie, "Ogil" will be shown. "Ogil" is based on the novel by Currier, with music by Frederick Loewe, lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner and is directed by Vincente Minnelli. It stars Leslie Caron, Maurice Chevalier, Louis Jourdan and Ann Ogburn and will be shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m.

Shedding Try-outs Are Scheduled
Co-ordinators Carol Strubel and Ann Schrackenberg have announced the AWS Fashion Show modeling try-outs will be held Wed. Mar. 11, at 7 p.m. in the CHSOC. Judging will be based on several factors, including poise, appearance, carriage, grooming and form. The fashion show will be held April 14, as a part of the Mothers' Weekend activities.

Little league or big league ...

Milk makes a meal

Pour a glass—tall and cold and fresh. How could anything so great-tasting possibly be good for you? But, then, that's Milk. No other food quite like it. A glass with every meal assures us the "vital energy" we need — while it builds strong bones and teeth, maintains bright eyes, and generally contributes to our well-being. What a refreshing way to stay in good health!
