SUNDIAL OFFENSE
MARKS TIME
AWAITING WILLAMETTE

If the sun doesn't shine, will the shadow work? And would east and west be diametrically opposed to a field layout in the same direction?

Tune in this Saturday to the PLU at Willamette game over KMO--better yet, be there--to get the answers to these puzzlers, plus the biggy--can Roy Carlson's grab-bag offense carry the Lutes to their first-ever victory over the Bearcats?

The Shadow Offense is another in a series of formation gems which Roy Carlson has come up with, ostensibly after reading the complete series of Frank Merriwell novels.

Airtime on KMO Radio is 1:15 p.m.

HATS OFF TO THE BIG DADDIES

If you sometimes weary of the materialistic outlook displayed by many of today's athletes, the "what's in it for me" attitude which permeates the Mr. Wonderful facade created by myopic press agents, how refreshing to find isolated cases where humanitarian instincts prevail in sports.

At PLU, the Lettermen's Club has forsaken the usual practice of converting cash earnings, from concessions and athletic program sales projects, into material goods such as team traveling blazers and sundry equipment, which indirectly benefit the purchaser, albeit a gift to the institution.

Instead, the club has recently assumed financial support of a foster child, under the Foster Parents Plan.

Lee Duk Jae, a 10-year old Korean, fatherless since infancy, now has 50 proud foster papas who have pledged their help to provide for cash needs, new clothes, supplies for school and household, as well as medical and dental care for Lee's family. Lee lives in Seoul with his mother and two older brothers.
