Two Candidates File for Editorship; Student Election Set for Tuesday

David Borglum and Roger Stillman will be the two names on the ballot when the student body votes Tuesday for the next MODRING MAST editor. The polls will be open at lunch and dinner in both dining halls.

Both candidates appeared in Student Convocation last Tuesday. At this time they presented their views of the editor's responsibiblica.

The Publications Board met Monday to review the qualifications of the applicants. Stillman and Borgham were the only two who applied for the post of editor. The publications board decided that both were qualified to run for the office, and so it approved them as candidates and submitted their names to the Indicial Board.

Borgium, who is a sophomore paychology major, halls from Los Altos, Calif. Stillman is majoring in speech and is from Lewiston, Idaho.

Sillman is news editor of the Mooring Mass. Before assuming this

Is the MOORING MAST really the voice of the students at Pacific Lutheran University"? Swallowing his pride as he prepares for two more issues before leaving office, the editor admits that he must answer "no."

There are students on campus who have been upser about the quiet and uncontroversal atmosphere that has hovered over the University community this year. While there is comething that can be said for this restful existence, the complainers are justified in expecting semething more than complete student apathy.

After a year in office, one begins to accept the fact that by writing editorials he is not going to drastically change the campus scene. The editor has stated before that a college sewspaper can be evaluated by the number of thought provoking issues it has raised but the student publication cannot be the only method of recourse for dissatisfied students. Believe it or not, there is a student government here on campus. And while our "leaders" are running around patting themselves on the back for the lack of contoversy, I would submit that they think the campus is quiet only because they are completely out of contact with the way many students feel.

These leaders were elected to represent student opinion, even if they happen to disagree with it. The point is simply that they were hired by the student body to put the ideas of a group into specific action.

There are many problems that should be presented, discussed and solved through the media of student government. The leaders who last year vowed to seek out student opinion have failed to keep their promises. Maybe they have been doing something this year that has been missed by the eyes of the newspaper staff and the student body. If so, they should have a good reply to this editorial.

A newspaper should not lead campaigns; it should merely introduce them. The MOORING MAST is always pleased to receive letters to the editor. The staff members are even happy to listen to the problems of the students. But there is a limit to what a newspaper can do.

So let's get with it, leaders! Open your ears: there are complaints, views, criticisms and opinions to be heard 'and acted upon. If a group, or even a segment, of the student family is concerned about the food service, the girls' hours, some poor instructor, the social life, the campus aroma, bookstore prices, and so on, you have a delegated responsibility to represent them. You are supposed to know the ropes around the University. You are in a position of power and esteem—remember?

And you students who are always finding something wrong, attend a Legislature meeting; demand to be heard. If there are grough of you, insist on some action,

Student government has died on campus this year because of a lack of creativity. We need leaders who are bold, original, imaginative and courageous in their thought. Or, as some might put it, we need leaders who will get off their back-sides long courage to find out what's going on.

The shocking impotency and inexcusable apathy of the student government leaders is a disgrace to the offices that they hold. Everyone has heard that student government is a farce. Let it not be said that the first proof came from our campus.

Letters to the Editor . . .

Boldness Hit

Dear Editor:

In the Dec. 11, 1964, Mooring Mast there appeared a letter to the editor which, I think, merits some comment. I shall not presume to say all that might be said about this letter and its presentation of the PLU total problem; there is too much to any, a great dec! of which is not of a complimentary nature.

The letter under discussion, submitted by one "Name Withheld" (and well it might be), made arread observations which were, by the author's admission, "bold." Several of these statements seem to be predicated on the illuminating revelation that high school graduates who "had the extensive social life would not have dreamed about coming to a church school 'monastery' . . ."

Several comments of "Name Withheld," together with the stated season for anonymity, i.e., "I want you to examine your social life, not mine," led me to wonder if this person may not be viewing the problem as one who had no social life in high school and who thinks he (she?) has none here. Would a person who had had this high school social life avoid a "monastery" such as PLU? I think not, "bold" one; any such assumption on your part is insulting not only to PLU but to the students involved.

I subtoit that there are a great many students at PLU who had an extensive high-school social life, and that the great majority of them are here because this shool is an academic institution, and a fine one. Perhaps this is a part of the problem An institution dedicated to academic ideals in anything more than the most shallowly nominal way must necessarily respace social life to second place on its life of majority. This is not to say that social life is unappurtual.

it is to say that the objectives of this institution are primarily academic and spiritual in miture, and that this has its effect on the type of social life which prevails. Perhaps the Humarian Quartet and related functions are as much a ferm of ocial life as Name Withhold's ideal of "kinama or being kineti."

Indeed, perhapt them is something which might benefit the PLU social situation more than some friendly, if anonymous, advice on how to "material states." Let us, in being boider than the "bold," carry this one step further—perhaps PLU is, in fact, populated less by overgrown high school waliflowers than by persons intellectually as well as socially active, who are trying to adjust to a different type of social and intellectual life than that which they experienced in high school.

As one trying to make this adjustment, I do not presume, 28 some have, to strike the root of the problem and offer sociologically correct solutions. I do, however, presume to say that there are many PLU students myself included, who were soeally active in high school: who are attending PLU besame it is a fine institution of brarning, rather than an expensive playground; who do not consider it a "monastery," but rather respect the social values which it seeks to foster: who do not impute to "social climate" (which seems, of late, to be more of a scapegoat than a descriptive term) their own shortcomings in adjusting to the life of an academic community; and who do not consider anonymous "bold" comments ameliorative to this or any other problem of college life.

Sacred Cows Are for Kids

Dear Editor

I do not believe that the ideas presented in "Frankly Speaking" last issue by Lynn Ertsgnard should simply stand without debate. The urticle, "Child-like Faith Deemed Normary, nuplied that the only means to a trucing communion with God is by a child-like, non-intellectrail way of thinking about the cutim structure of dozuna which one may associate with his faith. It leaves the impression that faith and any associated dogma belong isolated on some lovey tower, hermetically waled from any responsibility to that dangerously adult process called rea-

The only way to successfully scale the tower is to "became like little children," which in the view of this writer acres to mean a children sort of children to mean a children sort of children to mean a children to the of thought which may have a beauty so that to which we are "committed."

St. Paul, a man who dared to use his interfect to interpret Christ, aid, "Do not be children in over thinking be babes in evil, but in thinking be matured." He himself made full use of the right to apply the full capacities of adult intellect to faith; to duny it to modern man is ridienlous.

It seems to me that the much discusted "faith gap" would be consideraidy widened by setting all that faith may conecan nutside the domain of mental processes. I happen to think that a leap of faith is ultimately secessary in the adaption of Christizaity, but the longer that leap is, the more likely one is to fall short of any semblance to truth.

By opening one's belief to honest inquiry, one can make that leap narrower, or at least more directed, uncombered by excess bag are. Faith without my intellectual bare whatever may leave a gob so wide ut to be unworthy of the risk of leaping. Refusing to admit the right of mature reasoning to invode the sought-for childlike, trusting relation to God to a childish gullibility towards whatever may hoppen to inhabit that citadel.

The article goes on to present the simplicity associated with childlikents as the only way to approach scripture. Since the intellect is excluded in matters of religious faith, this implies a straight fundamentalist interpretation. Our "simple, tensting, loving childlike faith" thus becomes the basis, apparently, for being committed on a fundamental level to the contents of 66 books written over a span of more than a thousand years, without recourse to reason.

This demands a child-like, or rather, a childish faith, indeed. It demands total commitment, not to God, but to the infallibility of all the decisions and traditions which decisied which books hould be annifeld, to the infallibility of continues of copies and translators, and to one specific definition of respiration.

Defense of such a position is aided by a vivid imagination, for when conflicts accur within a repture as between scripture and acular tack, and such conflicts do occur at the fundamental land, absorate rationolizations may be the only way out.

I believ that a communion with God involving the kind of implicit trust and love found in a state is a state in a state in a state in a state in the manning of asthmatical trust a children relationship to assume that we are forever limited to children simplicity and non-criticism.

To do so would remove obsolutely all responsibility of the religious structuss to the human intellect, but that would be removing actial tool to be understanding. Rysponsibility for adult thinking does not end where faith and related dogma begin; sacred rows are for kids.

Campus Movies Set Academy Award Film for Saturday Night

by Al Rowberg

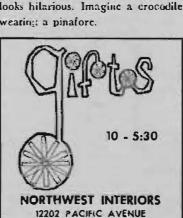

The Pulitzer Prize novel by Harper Les ted to an Academy Award for Green Peck, as "Best Actor" in "To Kill A Mockingbird." The reputation that this movie enjoys has bien earned, however, by its own modest effort, and not by flamboyant techniques. The film has followed admirably the book's lead in being a satise on race relations in the

This movie will be presented for the consideration of PLU students this Saturday evening, as the Camipus Movies presents it twice in A-101, at 7:00 and 9:30 p.m.

What makes "To Kill A Mockingbird" so immediately arresting is the way its events are untolded as perceived by the children involved in them, Scout and Jon, played by Phillip Alford and Mary Badham. Although a maisation looks back with some mostalgin on the efforts of lawyer Atticus Finch to win justice for a young Negro falsely accused of rape, nothing is shown that the children themselves could not have seen. Here Peck is capably assisted by Brock Peters in the role of the

Not all acting honors go to adults, however. Mary provides the best bit in the picture. Ordered by the cook to "sit right down at that table young lady and cat your breakfast; you're going off to school this morning whether you like it or not," the young lady drops herself into the chair as though she were dropping a dead mouse into the garbage. Then she stares at her e.eg as though it had hair on it. Finally she favors the cook with what is surely one of the dirtiest looks ever looked. On her, it looks hilarious. Imagine a erocodile wearing a pinafore.

'Wing Ding' Coming with Serendipity Singers

by Anka Malady

After slading its way through mes exotic places as Carnegie Hall, the land CARDED of Music will been "A Falk and Jazz Wing Ding" to FLLi's Meniocul Gymnasium on Friday, Feb 5. The concert, stated in beim at 8:00 p.m., will festure The Secondary Singers and Oscar Peterson Trite The Concert is sponand by the ASPLU; tickets are fitterd from $1.50 to $2.50 and may be immissed at the Information della Marian and Clay, Tacoma, and Luke wood Record Shop.

Il you have been humming Counted Little Islan" or "Beans in Your Ear, blame it on a business namination student, a prospective manient kistorian, a would-be psychologist and a bunch of music majoes-all paccessing a boundless zest for singing - who, having become commetrious at the University of Colorado formed the original core of the Sen ndipity Singers.

Each possessed the uncommon talrui be a fine solo performer, and they soon realized the distinct charpres of the Serendipity Singers, the molding together of a superbly bleaded group, which at the Mine time, emphasized the remarkable talent and personality of esch member.

The group composes about 90% of musical material, which is, to Fred Weimraub, "the new di-I thon folk music is taking. I'd classify their unique sound as 'Folk-Jazz' -Folk orientation but with jazz arrengements and instrumentation. They are building an act which will be an entire show in itself, utilizing each of the kids' great versatility and including comedy sketches, dramatic blackouts as well as their extraordinary musical sound."

The Secondinity Singers have recorded three albums for Philips, and have appeared on six "Hootenanny" ision shows. In view of the defimmon of "servedipity" meaning "the unexpected discovery of a new and happy event," the group seems to have chosen a most appropriate and descriptive name.

The Oscar Peterson Trici is a trio -not a featured pianist and subdued assistants. It is in this remarkable unity of purpose and expression that the group best serves itself and jazz. An "all for one" spirit separates the Peterson Trio from most of the chamber groups in modern jazz. There is no competition within the Peterson Trio context; each man has his say. And what each one says inspires the others, producing a whirlwind of spontaneous exploration. Whatever, the song the constant group interplay digs deeply into it, developing variations that flatter the

Peace Corps Test To Be Given

Peace Corps placement tests will be given on Jan. 9, 1965, at 8:30 a.m. at the Federal Building at 11th and A Streets in Room 407.

The test tells the Peace Corps in what area the applicant can best help the people of developing countries all around the world. It is not the type of test that one can pass or fail.

Any citizen of the United States who is eighteen years of age and has no dependents under age eighteen is eligible. Married couples are welcome if both husband and wife can scrve as volunteers.

To take the test the applicant must fill out the Peace Corps Questionnaire which is available at all post offices and the Peace Corps, Washington, D. C., 20525. Applicants who have not submitted a Questionnaire are requested to bring one to the test. For further information see Leighland Johnson, director of housing, in A-113.

Lockerby came to PLU from North Salem High School where he played two years of varsity ball. At Pacific Lutheran, "Locks," as he is minenty known, is active in the Letterman's Club and last year was an Intercollegiate Knight.

Lockerby commented on this year's seam, "I would like to say that the Knights, even with the 7-5 record so far, will be prepared for the Evergreen Conference go-round. We are learning each other's moves and are beginning to click as a team.

"Ours is a twelve man team-if one man isn't performing up to par, another moves in to take up the slack. Our tearn is a close one; there are no cliques and everyone fits in. For example, on road trips there are no special ways that the fellows always split up. The chience of the warm rults in a well-performing batherball machine.
