Alumni Association of Pacific Lutheran University

A Lifetime Commitment To Learning

Though he has been honored as PLU's oldest alumnus for many years, Olaf Gulbransen saw his graduation become official at Commencement 1971 Sunday, May 23. Technically a "drop-out" in 1903, Olaf now possesses a diploma from Pacific Lutheran Academy. Below: Mr. Gulbransen with Alumni Association President Ray Tobiason. See stories pp. 3-4.

585 Degrees Awarded At Commencement

State Sen. Gordon Sandison, D-Port Angeles honored

A total of 585 bachelor's and master's degrees were presented during commencement exercises at PLU Sunday, May 23.

A PLU Distinguished Service Award was presented to State Sen. Gordon Sandison, D-Port Angeles, for his service and contributions to higher education in the state.

Sandison has served as chairman of the Senate Committee on Higher Education and co-chairman of the State Legislature's Joint Committee on Higher Education.

A replica of a 1903 Pacific Lutheran Academy diploma was presented to Olaf Gulbransen, 88, PLU's oldest living alumnus. A senior at PLA that year, Gulbransen had to leave school shortly before graduation and never received his graduation certificate.

The 1971 graduating class, 534 bachelor's degree candidates, is the largest ever at PLU, some 53 more than graduated last spring. An additional 49 candidates received master's degrees.

A total of 208 bachelor of arts in education degrees were presented; also bachelor of arts, 188; bachelor of business administration, 52; bachelor of science in nursing, 49; bachelor of science, 20; bachelor of fine arts, 12; and bachelor of music, five.

PLU Names Dr. Schnackenberg Distinguished Teacher For 1971

A professor who is helping to develop people-to-people relationships between his own constituency and several foreign nations has been selected as PLU's Distinguished Teacher for 1971.

Dr. Walter Schnackenberg

The award, given annually to an outstanding PLU teacher by the Washington State Automobile Dealers' Association, was presented to Dr. Walter C. Schnackenberg, chairman of the PLU history department.

Dr. Schnackenberg taught at PLU from 1942-44 and returned to the campus permanently in 1952.

The professor's people-to-people activities include both his work as president of the Franklin-Pierce School Board and his development of foreign interim tours for PLU and selected local high school students.

He has taken students on interim tours to Italy and the Iberian Peninsula the past two Januarys since PLU switched to the 4-1-4 academic calendar. But his current pet project is a relationship being developed between the Franklin-Pierce District and educators in Laos.

The 53-year-old professor returned earlier this month from a

State Department-sponsored visit to the Southeast Asian country, where he participated in a series of meetings with educators at an American dependents' school in Vientiane, the Laotian capitol. He also was given an opportunity to tour parts of the beleaguered country.

Describing Laos, Schnackenberg painted a mental picture of a strategically-located country inhabited by primitive people who are utterly helpless to prevent foreign incursion, either from the North or from the South.

With reference to Vietnam, he felt the people would be better off if left to settle their conflict between themselves, but that such a pull out would leave 300,000 Laotians totally unable to feed themselves.

The Laotian refugees, he indicated, are mostly Northern Meos who have been driven down from the Highlands by the North Vietnamese, as well as refugees of hamlets all the way down the Ho Chi Minh Trail. A military pull out is inevitable, he said, but "economic aid through agencies like USAID will be a factor there for a long time."

He described the Laotians as "illiterate, primitive, passive people, tolerant and friendly of others. Their heritage is from the east, India and Burma, a gentler tradition. On the other side of the mountains, the Vietnamese are a more aggressive people with closer ties to China."

Schnackenberg is the fifth Distinguished Teacher selected since the annual program was created. Previous winners were Dr. George Arbaugh, philosophy; Dr. Jens Knudsen, biology; Dr. Donald Pattie, biology; and Dr. Jane Williamson, education.

Now It's Official!

PLU's Beloved 'Oldest Alum', Olaf Gulbransen, 88, Graduates

A "high school dropout" received a diploma at Pacific Lutheran University commencement exercises Sunday, May 23.

The "dropout" is Olaf Gulbransen, 88-year-old Tacoma resident, who went on to become a successful businessman and served as a PLU regent.

Gulbransen started high school in 1895 at PLU which was then called Pacific Lutheran Academy. The school had opened in 1894.

Olaf Gulbransen

The son of a Lutheran minister, Gulbransen returned to his home in Seattle in 1897 to earn money.

In the fall of 1901 he enrolled again at the Academy. In the meantime his family had moved to Stanwood where Gulbransen was assistant to the postmaster among other things.

In the spring of 1903, a couple of months before graduation, the Stanwood postmaster became ill and Gulbransen was summoned to take his place. He never returned . . . as a student, that is.

By the time the postmaster recovered the school year was over and Gulbransen was firmly entrenched in business endeavors.

In 1907 he married Millie Noss, a Stanwood lass. "We started out big," Gulbransen recalls. "With the help of Millie's father and the Stanwood bank we opened up a general store on the Mount Baker Highway, six miles east of downtown Bellingham," he said.

In 1920-21 the school he had left in Parkland added a two-year normal school and junior college and took the name Pacific Lutheran University. Gulbransen, an active churchman and sharp businessman, was elected to the board in 1927 and served six years as a regent.

Gulbransen's store and theaters continued to be highly profitable ventures, but in 1942 Millie's health began to fail and they sold out and returned to Stanwood. Because of his business acumen he was constantly in demand from a variety of local businesses, but he took nothing permanent and devoted most of his time to care for his wife (they had no children). Mrs. Gulbransen died in 1964 and shortly afterwards Gulbransen moved to Parkland and got an apartment just off the campus of his beloved PLU.

In the years he has been here Gulbransen has become a familiar figure in Parkland and on the PLU campus. He never misses a football or basketball game. He attends chapel regularly and takes in all the PLU concerts, lectures and recitals.

To be a member of PLU's Alumni Association, a person must have attended the school at least one year. Gulbransen has been an active member of the Association through the years and is believed to be the oldest living alumnus.

Sunday he became a bona fide graduate of his alma mater. President Eugene Wiegman presented Gulbransen with a Pacific Lutheran Academy diploma. It is the opinion of the faculty, regents and administration that this retired businessman and former regent has more than met the necessary graduation requirements.

Students Benefit Financially

Governor Signs Tuition Supplement Measure

A bill that will help defray this year's PLU tuition increase for some students was signed into law by Washington Gov. Daniel Evans May 6.

Senate Bill 419, which was introduced upon recommendation of the Governor's Council on Higher Education, gives an automatic $100-a-year tuition supplement to any student of a private college or university in Washington state who applies for it, provided that the student is a state resident.

PLU President Eugene Wiegman said the tuition supplement in effect cancels out this year's tuition hike for PLU students who live in Washington.

"It is among the purposes of this act to recognize the contributions made to the educational level of the citizens of this state by the independent and private institutions of higher education in Washington," the legislation reads in part.

This is the first major direct tuition supplement to students in private education in Washington. Some 34 other state offer either direct or indirect aid to private institutions.

"This measure represents a new philosophy of cooperation in higher education on the state level," Wiegman said. "We are looking at the comprehensive educational needs of Washington instead of looking at private and public institutions as separate, competing entities."

Part of the measure's success, the PLU president said, is due to an extensive educational effort on the part of Washington Friends for Higher Education, an association of the 10 accredited private institutions of higher learning in Washington.

Several state legislators deserve special credit for the passage of the important measure, including Rep. Marjorie Lynch, R-Yakima, and Sen. Gordon Sandison, D-Port Angeles. Mrs. Lynch and Sandison are, respectively, chairmen of the House and Senate committees on higher education.

Accreditation Ranks PLU School Of Business Among Nation's Best

The PLU School of Business received national professional recognition this month when it was accepted as an accredited member of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business.

Approval by the Association, the sole accrediting agency nationwide for business administration programs, puts the PLU undergraduate program in the top six per cent nationwide, and grants full membership in the accrediting organization. PLU President Eugene Wiegman indicated. Only 150 schools out of 2,500 conducting undergraduate business education programs are accredited AACSB members, he added.

The announcement was made at the Association's annual meeting, held in Denver. Receiving the report, Wiegman expressed the university's pride in the School of Business accomplishment.

"We are most pleased to join the distinguished ranks of schools holding full membership in the Association," he said. "This is a recognition of the fine program developed by D. Gunar King, dean of the School of business, his predecessor, Dr. Dwight Zulauf, and the entire business faculty. It is a continuing challenge to develop and maintain the standards of an accredited program."

Accreditation is granted following proven adherence to a set of high standards and maintenance of very specific curriculum requirements, according to Dr. King. The ranking has been achieved in spite of limited size in the 11th year since the founding of the school.

King also pointed out that the PLU program now has the dual advantages of being small and non-departmentalized with a student-faculty ratio of 18 to 1, while at the same time offering a strong curriculum with excellent faculty resources.

Since its establishment in 1960, the school has granted 249 bachelor's degrees and 45 master's degrees. The master's program was added in 1965. Both programs offer part-time and evening curriculum in addition to regular course offerings.

The AACSB report indicated that the PLU program well exceeds minimum personnel standards requirements. There are 12 faculty members holding doctor's degrees and four certified accountants on the 17-member business school faculty. Three new faculty members joining the staff next fall have all completed doctoral studies.

Other areas in which the school was examined and met requirements were admissions policies, faculty research, curriculum, library and financial resources and administration.

Among the smallest schools accredited by AACSB, PLU has solved the problem of limited numbers of faculty members, King indicated. "We have two or three specialists for each area," he said, "with most teaching in two fields. We consider this inter-field competence to be a major asset."

Students especially benefit from accreditation, King pointed out. Agencies such as state boards of accountancy, federal agencies and others who recruit business graduates with professional competence typically view AACSB accreditation as a standard of excellence.

Applicants may also take CPA examinations in other states without additional training or testing.

Accreditation procedures began in 1969 with a major self-study and included consultations with deans from five other accredited business schools. The school applied for accreditation last fall and was visited by an AACSB accreditation team in February.

Spotlight On Alumni

Jon Wefald

Martha Stoa

The man responsible for the well-being of one of Minnesota's major industries is a 1959 PLU graduate who was recently appointed Commissioner of Agriculture by Minnesota Governor Wendell Anderson.

Jon Wefald has served in his new post for five months after six years as a history professor at Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peter, Minn. At 33, the youngest to hold the state post, Wefald has pledged to be "a strong partisan for rural Minnesota and a champion of the family farmer, who will not stand around and watch small towns in Minnesota die."

Prior to his appointment, Wefald made two unsuccessful "but rewarding" flings at elective office. In 1968 he lost a Congressional race to 10-year incumbent Ancher Nelson, and last fall lost a close bid for state auditor to another political veteran, Rolland Hatfield.

After leaving PLU, Wefald earned a master's degree from Washington State and a doctor's degree from the University of Michigan.

He still maintains his home in St. Peter, which means a 160-mile commuting trip to St. Paul each day.

Martha Stoa, a 1962 graduate of the PLU School of Nursing, has recently returned to the States after almost five years as a missionary nurse in India.

Martha has been serving at the leprosy hospital in Salur. Since her return to the U.S., she has been kept busy with speaking engagements, including PLU, at which she has spread the message that leprosy is not the dread disease it is usually considered.

"It can be treated," she said. Also, she believes, much of what has been called leprosy over the centuries was actually skin cancer or other diseases that erode the flesh.

Martha is currently thinking of more graduate study in the field of public health.

A 1965 PLU graduate, Judith Doering Ginther, is one of only two teachers in the State of Washington working in the new federally-funded bilingual kindergarten program.

The school, located in Grandview, conducts classes in both the Spanish and English language. It is a five-year program which will enter its second year next fall.

Mrs. Ginther encouraged PLU grads to explore the brand-new field. A bi-lingual first grade teacher and another kindergarten teacher are needed next year, she said.

Taking Your Turn At Bat To Contribute To Your Team's Success

By Mal Soine

1971 Annual Fund Drive Chairman

What does one write to inspire fellow alums to support their alma mater? After you've already spent six months of intensive effort through person-to-person contact. After thousands of printed words have already tried to do the job.

Does it help to point out, to the yet uncommitted, that 20 per cent of the alums are carrying the load for the other 80 per cent? Do you point out that the majority seems to be apathetic about supporting the school and the concept of Christian higher education, a concept that has contributed so much to the richness and fullness of their lives?

Certainly, we must thank those dozens of alumni who not only contributed money, but also spent hundreds of hours planning this year's Annual Alumni Fund Drive; those alums who gave up time from their business and family to phone their fellow alums for dollars. These men and women participated willingly, with a sense of true dedication to Pacific Lutheran University and what the institution stands for.

The hopes and dreams we share for Christian higher education and Pacific Lutheran University require a "team effort" in terms of support. The forces of negativism in society today tear at the very foundation of what I'm sure PLU alumni really hold dear to their hearts.

If future generations of Americans are to enjoy the benefits of Christian education, then we, as alums of a Christ-centered school, must determine separately and together to join in total commitment to the idea of continuing such education.

Christian higher education is expensive. Your support, both in

Alumni Build Base For The 70's

By Ray Toblason
Pres., PLU Alumni Assn.

1970-71 has been an active year for YOUR ALUMNI ASSOCIATION. The prospects for 1971-72 are for even greater activity and impact, and the posture for the decade of the '70's is one of real enthusiasm and optimism. We are formed in an association to "increase our spirit of loyalty and fraternity, and to assist in better organization and development of a continuous and effective program of united action in promoting the welfare of the University and its alumni." I believe we are on the move in meeting these objectives.

Our program for this year has been directed not only at immediate needs, but has been developed to provide a base for broader and more significant participation by alums in their association. The association, in turn, is seeking to become a more viable instrument in relationships with the University and alum.

The establishment of Scene, of which this is the sixth issue, hopefully has brought the campus and fellow alums closer to you through many pictures and articles. A new full time director, Harv Neufeld, has been selected and will be on the job July 1, and plans are well under way for establishment of an Alumni House.

A recent gift to the University provided a residence for the University president in the Spanaway area and we expect to move into the former residence with our new director this summer. We hope you will stop by to see Harv and the crew; the residence is directly across from the University Center on the corner of 123rd St. and Park Ave.

Other activities this year have included an excellent fund drive, well-attended Homecoming, development of plans for a charitable bequest and dividend program, a fine Artist Series which brought top talent to campus, and continued support of scholarship, endowment, incentive awards and other alumni programs. We are proud to have had a part in both the drug abuse and Latin America symposia conducted by ASPLU, and a support role in providing research volumes for the School of Business library and microfilming equipment for the Registrar's records.

Several members of YOUR BOARD have terms expiring this year and they certainly deserve a word of thanks. These include Duane Berentson '51, Ron Lerch '61, John McLaughlin '71, Suzie Nelson '55, David Nesvig '57, Roy Schwarz '58 and Malcolm Soine '52. Special thanks to Ed Larson for his work as acting director of Alumni Relations this year.

Your officers for 1971-72 were elected at the Board of Directors meeting May 10. Serving as president is Roy Virak '52. First vice-president is Edroy Woldseth '47, and second vice-president is Bob Johnson '63. New Board of Director members will be elected in June by mail ballot. The ballot will be as follows:

Position 1: Ron Lerch '61, Kennewick, Wash., Rev. Duane Uilleland '52, Richland, Wash.

Position 2: Helen Jensen Hauge '52, Tacoma, Wash., Nan Aageson Nokolberg '53, Tacoma, Wash.

Position 3: Jim Feek '66, Seattle, Wash., Rich Hildahl '65, Steilacoom, Wash.

Position 4: Janice Oldham Osterloh '60, Kent, Wash., Dr. Christy Uilleland '63, Seattle, Wash.

Thank you for a good year. YOU AND YOUR ASSOCIATION mean a lot to PLU. As you continue your active support, PLU will continue to mean more to you.

HONOR CLASSES

1930 and Prior

1946

1971

By Dr. Eugene Wiegman
President, Pacific Lutheran University

Now it's over. PLU concluded its Year of Commitment by graduating the biggest and best class in its history. Biggest in terms of numbers, 534 bachelor's and 51 master's degrees, and best in terms of academic preparation.

It was an individual victory for each graduate who stepped across the auditorium stage to join you in the ranks of loyal alumni. At the same time, it represents a collective victory for every supporter of Christian higher education; and every alum of PLU.

Not the least among our graduates this spring was a very special gentleman, one Johan Olaf Gulbransen, who received his diploma on graduation day from Pacific Lutheran Academy, albeit 68 years late.

Olaf was the only graduate who received his own, personal standing ovation.

Graduation, of course, is known for its pomp and ceremony. Where else can one catch the faculty wearing their robes and academic hood? It generally strikes us as largely symbolic.

For each individual, graduation exercises mark a milestone in life, the successful completion of a personal commitment to their friends, their parents and themselves. It symbolizes the host of memories that make up a student's career.

In a larger sense, graduation symbolizes something far greater. It stands as a witness to higher Christian education at PLU. An education that communicates more than facts and figures. An education that affords each graduate a Christian context from which to make decisions.

That is why the granting of a degree to Olaf Gulbransen is so appropriate. Like commencement itself, Olaf is a symbol of what Christian education can stand for in a person's life.

The word commencement is originally derived from two words meaning "to begin together." That is what happens to each graduation. In spirit, these students go into the world together making a new beginning in life.

Throughout his life, Olaf Gulbransen has made new beginnings. He has had an outstanding career as a businessman, churchman and civic leader. He has, as his citation read in part, "given unstintingly of his time, talents, and material possessions for the benefit of his fellowman."

He is still making new beginnings at the age of 88. Education does not terminate at commencement. A person makes a new beginning, dedicates himself to renewed commitment, at many times in his life.

The day following graduation, I overheard Olaf talking to a secretary. Although I didn't hear her comment, I heard him reply, "Is that right? I didn't know that." Still learning.

None of this would ever have happened had it not been for men and women, former students like Olaf who, upon completion of his studies, gave of his time, his prayers and his personal fortune. He gave because he knew and believed in what PLU stands for.

Next fall, a flock of fledgling freshmen will step hesitantly onto campus. They will be inquisitive, ready to learn, and ready to make their contribution to this University. It is to the credit of Olaf and others like him, like you, perhaps, that these freshmen will have a place to start.

Deaths —

RALPH McGOUGH '48, deceased April 1971. Ralph was an only child, born and raised in Seattle.

Bertil Bilddt '42, was the classroom teacher at Clover Park where Ralph did his cadet teaching. Bert tells that Ralph had a natural empathy with youth and showed tremendous promise teaching math and science on his first assignment.

Ralph became principal of the Elementary School in Grays River Valley (Wash.) in 1948. His classroom was informal and Ralph often used humor to get his point across. But he retained a firm hand of discipline in order to assure the academic progress of his charges.

In retrospect, it is the academic achievements and the sense of values that he has instilled in his students which will live on to serve as his heritage. During the 14 years that Nasselle Grays River Valley High School named valedictorians and salutatorians, 17 of the 29 so honored came from Ralph's classes. More than a score went on to teaching or professional careers as a result of his inspired teaching.

He is survived by his wife Marie and a son, Tommy.

REV. MIKKEL LONO, Lutheran minister and former vice president of PLU, died April 2, 1971. Mr. Lono was born in Roldal, Hordaland, Norway, and moved to the United States as a child. He attended Luther College, Luther Seminary and Princeton Theological Seminary.

He served as pastor of Lutheran churches in Minneapolis and Kasner, Minn.; Maddock, N. D.; Lee Spruce and Appens, Mich.; and in Tacoma, of Our Saviors, Lutheran Memorial and Emmanuel Lutheran. He served as vice president of PLU from 1937 to 1945.

Mr. Lono was known as a conservative Bible scholar.

Survivors include his wife, Thelma A.; four children, Maj. Luther A., missing in action in SE Asia; MARK '64, of Madison, N. J.; Mrs. Ruth Gray, of Baltimore, Md.; and Mrs. Harold J. B. Thompson, of Honolulu; a sister, Mrs. Conrad (Sarah) Seversen, of Britton, S. D.; a niece, Mrs. Chet Jorgensen, of Federal Way; and 14 grandchildren.

A. HERMAN FOSS '11, died May 7, 1971. He was born in Nytingness, Norway, and founded Northwest Dairy Supply Co., Inc. in Seattle 50 years ago. He is survived by his wife, Marie, and relatives in Norway.

CECIL W. SCOTT '31, died May 1, 1971. He was born in Amish, Ia and lived in Tacoma since 1958. Mr. Scott was principal at Olympic View Elementary School, in Federal Way. Survivors include his wife Edna M.; a daughter, Mrs. James (Sharon) Wagar, of San Juan, Puerto Rico; two sisters, Mrs. K. W. Eide (Mabel Scott '51), of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Mrs. Elmer Stern (Helen E. Scott '37), of Tacoma; and three granddaughters.

Lute Rowers Win LaFromboise Cup; Fail To Retain Sprint Title

Two razor-thin losses in the West Coast Sprints by PLU's defending champion four-with-cox shell put a damper on an otherwise successful rowing season. The season, however, saw the Lutes bolster their image as a West Coast rowing power.

Set back possibly by a hectic finals week during which they were able to practice as a unit only once, the Lute four lost the opening heat of the Sprints to the University of Washington B entry by .3 of a second, then was nosed out by .1 second by Loyola of Los Angeles in the repechage.

The previous week, however, the PLU varsity eight put it all together to win the LaFromboise Cup in the Steward Cup races on Lake Washington, a title indicative of Northwest Small-College rowing supremacy. The same week they won their eighth straight Meyer Cup against University of Puget Sound on American Lake.

In other races, the fours defeated Oregon State and Oregon in a triangular meet at Corvallis, Ore., then returned to Corvallis two weeks later for the Northwest Small College Regatta which they won easily over runner-up Western Washington.

The victories gave the fours four victories in five starts prior to the Sprints.

PLU Offers Summer Cage Camp For Boys

Under the direction of basketball coach Gene Lundgaard, PLU will host the first annual Pacific Lutheran University Basketball Camp in four weekly sessions, July 18 through Aug. 14.

The camp, open to boys entering grades eight through 12, offers personalized instruction in fundamentals and techniques of basketball plus game competition.

While off the Uniturf Olson Auditorium court, the boys will have access to all of PLU's recreational facilities, swimming pool, handball courts, tennis courts, weight room, golf course, bowling alley and billiards room.

Lundgaard and co-directors Bob Ross '54 and Lyle Frahm will serve as instructors for the three "stay" camps, July 18-24, July 25-31 and Aug. 1-7, plus the Aug. 9-14 "day" camp.

Ross, former Lute cager, is varsity coach at Washington High School, while Frahm, an All-American mention at Iowa State, is with Converse Rubber Co.

The "stay" camp fee is $85 per session while the "day" camp cost is $45. For further information contact Lundgaard c/o the PLU Department of Athletics.

Lutes Upset Whitman To Gain First Conference Links Title

For the first time in six years the Whitman Missionaries were unseated as Northwest Conference golf champions. And the team that pulled off the upset was a red-hot troupe from Pacific Lutheran University.

Paced by Blake Bostrom, a freshman from Yakima who took medalist honors, the Lutes widened a narrow six-stroke margin at the halfway point to a 19-stroke cushion at the end of the final 18

Vern Morris, 50, was honored recently when he was named to the Pierce County Athletic Hall of Fame. Morris, who is director of recreation at Western State Hospital, Ft. Steilacoom, Wash., was a stellar performer in football and baseball at PLU in the late 1940s.

Spikers Save Peak Efforts For Conference Meet; Win Title

Coach Paul Hoseth's "new look" track squad entered 1st year's Northwest Conference meet in the favorite's role after climbing from last place in two seasons.

They finished a relatively disappointing third.

But this year was different. "We decided we were not going to waste our peak performances in dual meets this year," Hoseth explained. "We wanted to do our best at the conference meet."

They did. In fact they turned the meet into a small rout, convincingly breaking the stranglehold Lewis and Clark and Willamette have had on the title for the past 22 years.

Prior to the May 7-8 meet in Salem, Ore., the Pioneers had claimed nine of the last 12 and 13 of 22. Willamette won six of those 22 and Whitman had a powerhouse from 1956 to 1958.

The 1971 meet hinged on the 880 run halfway through the program and it was there Hoseth's plan worked to perfection. Neil Martin and Don Milholland, fifth and tenth respectively in conference time standings, finished one-two, clipping a combined total of six seconds off their best times.

That race, together with 1-2-3 finished in the shot, 1-2-4 in the discus and a double victory in the hurdles by John Oberg, gave the Lutes 62 of their winning 100 points.

Willamette finished a distant second with 67, Lewis and Clark had 56, Pacific had 29 and College of Idaho, Linfield and Whitman finished out of contention.

But it was definitely a team victory. PLU scored points in every event but the javelin to record the school's fourth championship of the year.

Individual winners were Randy Shipley, shotput, 50-6; 120 high hurdles, Oberg, 15.0; 880, Martin, 1:57.3; 440 intermediate hurdles, Oberg, 55.2 (new conference record); and discus, Dan Pritchard, 146-0.

On the strength of their Salem showing, a Lute contingent of undetermined size will journey to Ellensburg to participate in the NAIA District I meet May 29.

FB's Ross Boice Receives Top Senior Award

Ross Boice, Lute football captain who has signed with the NFL Los Angeles Rams, was awarded the Jack Hewins Senior Award at the all-sports banquet May 12.

Boice played defensive end and offensive tackle and was an All-NWC and All-Northwest selection at both positions. The 6-2, 245-pounder was also a third-team Associated Press Little All-America choice.

Ross Boice accepts first Hewins (top senior) award from Mrs. Hewins.

Boice accepted the plaque, named for the late Associated Press sportswriter and presented for the first time, from Mrs. Hewins.

Greg Freitag, Tacoma basketballer with a 3.73-grade-point average overall, 3.89 in his business administration major, received the scholarship award.

Diana Dahl of Seattle was named woman of the year in sports.

Most Valuable awards were presented to sophomore John Oberg in track and senior Phil Lavik in baseball.

Marv Harshman '42, Washington State University basketball coach and former Lute mentor, was the guest speaker. Jim Kittilsby '60, sports information director, was master of ceremonies.

holes of play. The final team score was 1245.

The Missionaries finished second with 1264, followed by Lewis and Clark (1274), Willamette (1290), Linfield (1293), College of Idaho (1296) and Pacific (1309).

Bostrom fired rounds of 75, 71, 78 and 77 to card his 72-hole total of 301 and win medalist honors by seven strokes.

A pair of Whitman golfers finished second and third, but the Lutes' Lynn Pettit, a Wadena, Minn. senior, tied for fourth (311), to give PLU two representatives on the five-man All-Conference team.

Juniors Jeff Spere and Rick Alfien finished with 316 and 317 respectively, while Gary Rick carded a 339.

The tournament was played in segments at Salem and Cornelius, Ore.

For Coach Gene Lundgaard, it was his second conference championship of the year. He earlier led the Lute basketball team to its first championship since joining the NWC in 1965.

It's apparent, as pundits say, that Lundgaard speaks with authority on the skills required to put a round ball in a round hole.
