Boreal Atmosphere Inspires Ingenuity

Brrrrr—Brrrrrrrrrrrr! To freeze, or not to freeze; that is the question; whether 'tis nobler in the mind to go to bed and freeze to death or to take arms against a bed of ice and wear wool socks and an overcoat. And then wake up about four a. m. to discover you should have put on a woolen hat and a pair of mittens. And then sit almost time to dress and you experience what we might call "twenty-second of reality" or coading yourself out of bed to close the window and watch your breath fall from your mouth like icicles.

Everyone's been walking in a "winter wonderland" this last week. At last we now have a slight conception of how winter might appear in a wonderland. Happy-Ness discovered something, too. She knows now how a sugar-lump feels in a cup of coffee. At least that's how she felt the other night when she was tripping the light fantastic over a frozen pond, and then all of a sudden—instantaneously and without warning—snap! crack! and Happy found herself almost hip-high in a mad ecstasy of icy water. "I don't know whether it was saturation or capillary action, but it sure was wet."

Saw something original in the line of sleds the other night. Simple enough. Just sit on a piece of cardboard; give yourself a push and if you don't take about three summersaults and land on the very tip of your cranium at the foot of the incline, you can try it over again or go home and take up knitting.

But, what a difference a day makes! Or rather, what a difference a night makes. Sunday evening we heard a discussion about the amount of snow there would be on the ground Monday morning. Somebody said that three inches had fallen in five hours, and they wondered how many more would fall in nine. Anyway it was all decided that by mousing the street car tracks would be way down under heaps of snow, and ambitious students could spend the day building snowmen on deserted street corners. And then came the dawn, and when we leaned out of the window to approximate the depth of the snow, lo and behold our surprise to find that another creature had turned traitor and brought us back to earth with a slushy splash of our favorite antipathy: RAIN!

Hong, advisor for the editorial staff.

Board Of Trustees Has Important Meet

New Members Introduced; Highby, Taylor Granted Leaves of Absence; Budget Approved

The Board of Trustees of Pacific Lutheran College met at the home of Dr. O. A. Tingelstad Tuesday, January 15. Those who attended the board meeting for the first time were Rev. J. Groschupf of Spokane, and Rev. E. C. Jorr of Seattle, both representing the American Lutheran church; Rev. N. Wm. Anderson of Spokane, President of the Columbia Conference of the Augustana synod; and Mr. M. T. Hokenstad of Snohomish, who is filling the vacancy caused by the passing of Mr. M. H. Forde.

Most of the time was spent in considering plans for improving the financial status of the College through the assumption of more direct financial responsibility by the congregations constituting the Pacific district of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America. In charge of presenting this plan, is a special committee consisting of the District President, Rev. H. L. Fos of Seattle, district financial secretary Theo-Hokenstad of Bremerton, Rev. S. J. Ylvisaker of Stanwood, Rev. T. O. Svare of Parkland, and Victor Elvestrom of the College. Publicity in regard to this matter is in the course of preparation.

Business manager Larson submitted an operating budget of $38,268, and a maximum service budget of $28,000 for the year 1935-36, of which the Board approved.

Prof. Paul R. Highby, Biology instructor, was granted a year's leave of absence if he secures the fellowship that he desires. Mrs. Louise S. Taylor, county superintendent-elect, was given an extended leave of absence beginning at the close of the current school year. A leave of absence for Mr. Paul A. Preus was extended to April 1, 1935, at his own request.

The Board approved Coach Clifford O. Olson's gymnasium project, namely, dressing rooms for the athletes in the unfinished portion of the gymnasium basement.

The next meeting will be held sometime in the first part of April.

Second Semester Classes To Commence On Tuesday

To avoid conflicts in registration, Dean Haug announces that there will be no classes held on Monday, the first day of the spring semester. Monday will be devoted solely to cardmaking with classes beginning on schedule Tuesday morning.

The Dean also expects a substantial increase in enrollment over this semester's total.

Helen Holtcamp and James Gillilan have been chosen for the associate editorship. The remainder of the editorial staff includes class editors: Rachel Flint, graduate; Ellen Bergstrom, sophomore; Ida Merz, freshman; and Harry Gribbom, high school; Judy Benson, and Francis Archbold, organizations; Hazel Hagerup, women's sports; Eldon Anderson, men's sports; Evelyn Ecklund, activities; Evlyya Syverson, music; Bertrum Myhre, religion; Roberts Torrison and Arnold Anderson, art; Valborg Norby and Gary Pflueger, school life; Louise Jackson, personals; Eline Benson, Elizabeth Frits, Ruth Haugland, typists.

As advertising manager, Clifford Mesford will be assisted by Joanna Manousos, Eleanor Hauke and Vern Lutzen. William Pflueger will serve as circulation manager with Inge Madson, Aida Johnson and Irene Odell as assistants. Fritz Joh Tayet will act as accountant.

Thelma Daniels, recently appointed editor, has worked on last year's and this fall's editorial of the Mooring Mast and is at present Pacific Lutheran College correspondent to the Tacoma News Tribune. Besides this journalistic experience she served last year as the vice-president of the Drama club and secretary of the French club and this year holds the position of vice-president of the student body.

Roland Swanson, business manager for the Year Book served as circulation manager of the 1933-34 Saga. Last year he was president of the Mission Society, vice-president of the freshman class and a member of the debate squad.

"Apparently a biennial publication is not satisfactory as an annual. Accordingly, 1935 will again find P. L. C. with a Saga. We have chosen the staffs; our advisers are helping us. What we need now is the cooperation of the student body," asserts Miss Daniels.

"As the school year is already far advanced, please make immediate payments on the Saga in order that the editorial work may go on unhampered. A downpayment of 50c is required with the remainder of the $2 due in successive payments," states Mr. Swanson.

At a special meeting of the faculty committee on publications held yesterday the contract for the printing of the Annual was awarded to Johnson-Cox Company, printers of the Mooring Mast. Mr. Frank Miller, who has had many years of experience in annual work, will represent the company and directly supervise the publication.

The Mooring Mast

Published every two weeks during the school year by the students of Pacific Lutheran College, Parkland, Washington. Entered as second class matter, October 2, 1925, at the Post Office at Parkland, Washington, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Take An Interest In National Affairs

Much has been written in college papers throughout this country concerning the interest which students in other countries, particularly in Germany, have in current political events. Much regret has been expressed that we are far behind foreign students in this respect. While with us political events raise little comment, with them they are a supreme interest that knits them together into a bond of comradeship which is attached with the most profound patriotism to the political leaders of their country. There is a sort of poetic halo attached to their idea of government which has power to grip youth and to create in them something that is almost spiritual.

We, in this country, are a heterogeneous people springing from different racial backgrounds. In the great melting pot which is America divergent cultures have been amalgamated into a people of broad and vague principles of government. The political parties that we have are not clean cut. Our government has been primarily one carrying out its business of regulating a tariff so that our economic life might be smooth and prosperous. Things have gone so well, that our treasury has been heaped with surplus. There has been little need for concern or interest on the part of students in the affairs of the government.

Now things are different. Two problems have arisen demanding a solution. Conflicting theories are struggling for supremacy. The future is a large question mark. Now is the time for us as students to awake to things of national concern.

Our God Is Powerful

Have you ever noticed the strength of God's forces—how at His command the winds and waters become the very essence of power? The winds will shriek and howl, the rain pour down in torrents, and the huge ocean waves leap and crash against the rocky coast, at His slightest bidding. God's will is indomitable; no man can bring forth the fury of an ocean-gale, yet the Lord can do it with the greatest of ease.

Still, in all this power, He plants beauty of all kinds. Is there anything more soul-inspiring than a rare orchid? Its petals, so stainless and clean, colored only by the soft pen of nature, are so delicate that one fears a breath will destroy them completely. His mountains, and canyons are symbols of strength, but who can deny their beauty.

The Book Of Books

Literature is created that we might find expression for our emotions. Of all the volumes that have been written none have been able to do this completely except the Bible. In the Bible we find psalms of prayer in which the soul cries from the depths of despair and emptiness up to God, we find psalms of praise in which the heart flows over with thanksgiving. There are in this book outbursts of disgust at vanity; there are expressions of satisfaction that the ways of God are just.

In this book are outlined human tragedies and triumphs. Life in all its varied aspects of prosperity and poverty, the soul in its struggle against temptation fill its pages. When in need of finding expression we have only to turn to this limitless source to receive satisfaction.

Do Some Constructive Reading

How much reading are we doing? It is impossible to read much of our own choosing as most of our time is needed for the scheduled lessons. There are, however, moments now and then that are idle in which a good book could be enjoyed. In looking over the shelves of the library we find some interesting volumes that could fill the space of these idle moments. There are for instance, Emil Ludvig's "Napoleon" and his "The Son of Man." Both of these books are biographies of historic personalities in which the author has clothed the skeleton of historical facts with the flesh of his own imagination. There is in Emil Ludvig's works the tone of the universal artist which gives to the reader the sense of being in contact with the center of today's literary thought.

An interesting periodical is the Scandinavian American Review. There are in this magazine accounts of the political, economic, and literary happenings of the three Scandinavian countries. The articles are well arranged and written in immaculate style.

For the students taking German and French there are shelves of German and French classics which include the best in the literature of these countries. Although much of this may be considered too heavy for leisure reading there are works among them that have all the flavor and interest of our own American novels.

Next L. D. R. Meet To Be February 21 At Xavier's

With Mrs. Xavier and Mrs. Larson entertaining, the Lutheran Daughters of the Reformation will meet Thursday, February 21 at the home of Mrs. J. U. Xavier. The following program has been planned: a piano solo by Bernice Haug, a talk by Ellen Bergstrom, a reading entitled "Faithful Under Fire" by Bergliot Vogan, and a vocal solo by Mildred Monson.

The last meeting of the society was held on Thursday, January 17 at the home of Mrs. O. A. Tinglestad. Mrs. Elizabeth Bondy and Mrs. Tinglestad being toastesses.

It was voted to pay two dollars during this year to the Development Association of Pacific Lutheran College. The entertainment included a vocal duet by Margaret Craft and Mary Nash, a clarinet and saxophone duet by Marjorie and Dorothy Wade, and a reading, "Faithful Under Fire," by Lila Radd.

HAVE YOU MET?

A merry young lady, medium sized, with black hair, and a very infectious smile? For two years she has been a member of the college club.

Hailing from Tacoma, she sees a little of the night life around P. L. C., but she does not in a full day around school as she works for the college administration. She is an active worker on committees and can always be entirely depended upon. She is a member of the graduating normal class, and at times, when she puts on her spectacles, she has that typical "school marm" charm.

The songbird of P. L. C.? He's noted for his singing ability, wherever he treads to be, musical notes follow. He has been a member of the choir for two years, and is a member of the school quartet, more commonly known as the "Socorrie Stoooges"—Monson, Thompson, Eliason and ?—. Being one with great leadership ability, he was chosen as President of the Day Boy's Union, and also as a group leader of the Drama Club. His first masterpiece "Elmer" was enough to signify that he "knew his stuff" when it comes to picking plays.

With a stature of about 5 feet 7 inches plus blonde tresses, to say nothing of those big blue eyes, he could easily "get by" as our "Clark Gable." He won't admit it, but what's his idea against millions of others.

PREXY'S CORNER

"Knowledge is Power," but power only as it is used. "Most knowledge is forgotten very soon, and therefore knowledge, contrary to a popular conception, is not the most important result of a College education.

I would place at least the following traits ahead of mere knowledge: the Christian philosophy of life; the mental perspective of the educated person; the disciplined mind with its analytical mode of attack upon problems; and the abiding friendship and contacts of College life with its myriad precious memories.

After winning nine consecutive wins, old man defeat finally overtook the Junior College champs. What looked to be a perfect season with no defeats, was ruined by none other than the highly rated boys from across the mountains, Ellensburg. According to reports, P. L. C. could have won the game with their foul shots but were unable to make only four out of sixteen tries. Not so good. We will be ready, though, when the Westerners travel across the hump to meet us on our own floor in the near future.

At the present time, Pacific Lutheran College's basketball team is running first in the Washington Junior College Championship race with four wins and no defeats. If they keep up the rate they are going and overcome Mt. Vernon, we will have no trouble in keeping the coveted trophy in our trophy case for another year.

Among the other teams in the J. C. race, is Mt. Vernon Junior College. This team won a close victory over Yakima and lost by quite a large score to Ellensburg. We have not met this team yet but when we do so, it will be a game what is a game. By comparative score, the Lutherans have a slight edge, but that means very little in this game of basketball.

Say, what is the matter with your school spirit, students? Don't you know that we have a basketball team? The looks of the crowds at the last few games indicates your lack of school spirit. Let's all turn out for these games and see a real championship team in action.

Let's forget, students, the boys are not the only ones who indulge in the sport known as basketball. It has among its followers, members of the fairer sex who also receive much enjoyment and exercise from this game of games. We find the girls from their respective classes attempting to uphold as the boys strive to outdo other schools in their class. Why not go out and watch these games?

At the end of the semester, John "Fud" Fadness will be lost to the team. Fud has completed his course here at P. L. C. and his loss will be felt considerably. John is a very dependable guard and all there when it comes to making necessary points.

After looking over the scorebook, we have completed the following statistics that we thought would be interesting to all of you. Here's how the fellows on the squad stand in point making in ten games played:
Moe 80, Nilson 57, Jack 53, Fadness 50, Solle 35, Tommervik 22, Sanderson 20, Votaw 14, Frye 13, Archbold 12, Ford 7.

Centralia Bows Twice To Glads

Lutherans Overwhelm Conference Opponents 59-15 and 41-13 in Home and Home Series

Paced by Dutch Moe and Chet Solle, the Pacific Lutheran College Gladiators won a decisive victory over the Centralians, on the Hub City floor Thursday, Dec. 20, by the lump total of 59-15.

With the Lutheran offense clicking and the defense airtight Coach Olson's first team ran up a large score. The second squad then took the burden upon their shoulders and, without any difficulty doubled the score of the first quarter and managed to hold the opposing team to a low score.

Solle was high point man for the winners with eleven and Parker and Burdette were tied for the losers with six apiece.

Playing on the home court, the Gladiators chalked up a 41 to 13 victory over Centralia Junior College on January 12. The game was the third conference victory for the Lutherans and the eighth consecutive win.

The defensive play of the Lutherans was the best seen in quite some time. Centralia was allowed but four points, one field goal and two foul throws in the last three quarters.

Nilson, P. L. C.'s rangy center, walked off with high point honors with 17 counters; Burdette was high for the visitors with 7 points in his credit. Line-up for the games are as follows:

P. L. C. (59) (15) Centralia

Glads Hand Oregon Tech Two Drubbings

The Gladiators first string was entirely too much for the invaders and Coach Olson made use of his second and third stringers to add interest.

Gene Jack and "Dutch" Moe led the scoring for the Lutherans while Nice was outstanding for the losers.

Lutherans Take Martians 29-27 on Lacey Floor

A last minute rally enabled the Pacific Lutheran College cagers to trounce a fighting St. Martins team 29-27, on the angers' maples at Lacey Friday, Jan. 11.

Although without the services of several of the first string men, the boys eked out a win after experiencing considerable difficulty in connecting with the hoop. Gene Jack and Dutch Moe looked outstanding for the Lutherans and Stanley, center, shone out for the Lacey boys.

The game was a non-conference tilt and the Gladiators seventh straight victory.

Semester's Ending Brings Broken Hearts: Students Crack As Professors Weaken

The climax of the semester is here! That day in preparation for which we have spent the major part of four and one half months, supposedly. That day of inward quakings and outward calm, sometimes. That day upon which the stoutest heart weakens, women scream, and strong men pale. The days of days when if ever, true character becomes evident. The old test. The sudden and rude break from dreams to realities. Examinations—the inventory of the semester, and what a searching one!

A distinct quiet seems to have pervaded the school. The rowdies and "stooges" settle down in a despondent, sincere, but futile effort to do five months' work in half an hour. D students plead with A students for hints on studying. Notes are borrowed; a quiet, but confused and irregular stream of questions pour from anguished hearts. Why? Because today, the average student is thinking of examinations, of the ultimate grades, of the paternal attitude resulting, of the hopes and prayers of those loving and unselfish parents who sacrifice that their child might have the opportunities that they, perhaps, had. Oh, yet examination week brings to a head the problems of many. It is invariably the cause of many regrets and, "Oh, why didn't I study a little harder?" Upon consideration, the exam week should hold no terror for the average student. There should be more than the minority who really could enjoy the week, and who could without regret, nor horrible anticipations, regard this monstrosity, this monster that spoils the whole year of good time, that robs the whole thing of the fun and carefreeness of college life. We have to listen to professors' hours every day. We are taught and commanded to sit without struggle and make an effort to assimilate the most impossible and irrelevant (we think) formulas, quotations, knowledges, et cetera. Then, adding insult to injury, we are actually asked to make it evident to this same learning and laughing giant who is our teacher to make it evident, in black and white, that we actually remember enough of the horrid stuff to justify his passing us through the course. Of course it's hard to take. It's unbearable, and what we probably need is a reconstruction of our entire—educational processes.

It looks, though, in spite of all our protests and arguments, that there simply isn't anything in the world that can be substituted for actual knowledge when it comes to taking an exam. If you know it, you're all right, and if you don't, then you are very muchly all wrong. There's no getting around it. Anyway, now they are almost all over; by tomorrow they will be forgotten, and all we have to do is put off all our next semester's work until the last few days like we did this semester, and as we will probably do, along with all our predecessors, ad infinitum. Such is man.

Rain Inspires Reporter's Imagination Bringing Remarkable Change To Surroundings, Professors

Ho-hum, rain, rain, raty, and more rain. Doesn't it ever do anything but rain? Here it is the day after it rained, and it is still raining. Well perhaps it is the best thing that could happen during exam weeks, keeping away the temptation of a few long walks. But then come to think of it, it rained before we left to go home for Christmas, and most of us found that rain greeted us as we got home—oh dear. I guess there could be a lot of things worse—for instance, it could rain harder and faster; it wouldn't necessarily need to give up just after lunch hour when we are starting classes and couldn't go for a walk anyway, but it does and after all that's something.

Well, I guess I shouldn't be growling 'cus after all think of all the millions of people who are praying daily for rain.

As I live and die! Are my eyes deceiving me or can that really be our old pal Reid rowing to school in the cutest of row boats. And strike me pink, if the rain hasn't been a blessing to him. Most air always does the crops good, so I hear.

Well, well, well! Look who's coming here. Mr. Edwards, and what's that he has on his automobile? Pontons? Yesir. Aren't they too ducky for words. Dr. Tingelstad does not intend to be outdone by the others, 'cus look at the diving board he has hanging out of his upstairs window, just for our purpose. It is rumored around that school will be dismissed early this afternoon for the purpose of using the diving board in an afternoon of fun.

I'm getting a faint glimpse of something coming down the road right now, and if I'm not mistaken, it sort of looks like Mr. Hong, and yesar it really is, and the fashion in which he is coming to school—he is riding on a surf board being pulled by five of our huskiest athletes—Jack, Votaw, Dreiblebis, Nilsson, and O'Connor. Such grace and poise as is shown by the professor, that it is easily realized that he has spent a great many years in this part of the country.

That surely can't be the street car? No, it can't be, but it is, and so I sneeze, what a sight. The car is not run by only one conductor, but by many, for at each window sits a conductor clad in blue, holding an oar and gliding along to the vulgar, oh oh—the Voice Boatman. Heave ho! The car stops and out steps Ramstad. Such regal and to think he's a college professor, too. He wears a divers uniform which he purchased in town for the purpose of keeping his feet and shoulders dry. Upon arriving at the school he unvelts and finds himself as "dry as the Sahara Desert." We hope that all the profs don't take on this style too seriously, for think of all the noise and the clanking good time that would be had. (Irony).

Mr. Highby, wise "quarters" are on the east side of the building has spent most of his quiet moments inventing transparent, waterproof canvases, to veil over his windows. He discovered a formula for it, and, this morning we saw him breaking out his old glass panes and replacing them with his own "handicraft."

Coach Olson plans to move into the dorm as he fears the rain is getting him down. We don't know for sure, but we heard he even wore rubbers one day to school, but he removed them before he entered the building, because he didn't want his big football boys to see them.

German Club Will Elect Officers At Next Meet

At the next meeting of the German club to be held Tuesday, January 23, an election of this coming semester's officers will take place.

In addition to this election there will be a program consisting of a biographical sketch of Bach by Thelma Daniels, and violin selections by Eugene Burgoyne.

College Choir Decides On Sweaters, Chemille Letters

For the first time in the history of the organization, the "Choir of the West" will be distinguished by sweaters, as a result of the voting of the choir. These sweaters will be substituted for the gowns at some of the choir appearances.

Jane Williams, Evelyn Syverson, Osten Ellason, and Arnold Anderson comprise the committee in charge of arrangements for this regulation sweater. The sweater, a slip-on style, has the insignia P. L. C. with a note running through the lettering. "Choir" is also included on this chemille letter. The sweaters will be distributed to the students in about a week.
