The world-famous St. Olaf Choir of sixty voices from St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minnesota, will present a choral concert in the C-M-S Sunday evening. Their performance begins at 8:00 p.m., with an admission of 75 cents for students and $1.25 for adults.

Concert numbers are grouped in a four-part program. One section will include favorite chorale pieces, such as Bach's "Jesus Priceless Treasure." Another is made up of twentieth century psalm settings, and another, selections from seasonal hymns, carols, and liturgical music. Climaxing the evening will be the hymn "Beautiful Savior," in a special arrangement by the director.

Sunday's stop in Parkland is part of the choir's annual tour of three to four weeks. Past trips have taken the choir to Europe in 1955 and to Iceland in 1957. When they return to Northfield on February 18, they will have traveled through ten states, including Iowa, Colorado, California, Oregon, Montana and North Dakota.

Following the concert the choir will be entertained at a reception in Chris Knutzen and then drive to Seattle for an evening performance.

Spiritual Emphasis Week Commences; Dr. Alvin N. Rogness To Be Leader

With the theme, "The Lordship of Christ in a Space Age," Sunday marks the opening of Spiritual Emphasis Week under the leadership of Dr. Alvin N. Rogness, president of Luther Theological Seminary in St. Paul.

Throughout the week, Dr. Rogness will base his chapel and evening talks to the student body around five sub-topics pertinent to religion in our contemporary society, often referred to as the space age.

Presents Question

In the keynote sermon at Divine Worship this Sunday, Dr. Rogness will present the challenging question, "Is God Outdated?"

Further topics will be Monday's "Is Space Man Different?"; Tuesday the topic will be "Where Do You Meet God?"; Wednesday Dr. Rogness will present the question, "Why Does God Care?" and the concluding topic on Thursday is "What Does God Ask?"

An informal service will be held

Distant Places Represented by Visiting Mothers

This weekend the campus will host about two hundred guests for the Associated Women Students' Annual Mothers' Weekend.

Tonight at 8:00 p.m., mothers and daughters will attend a talent show under the direction of Margery Krueger.

Shows TV System

Tomorrow morning the mothers will be given a tour of the new television system with Professor T. O. Karl as host; a short invocation by President Eastvold; a tour of the studio; Vice-President Choe Peterson will give the university structure, followed by a demonstration lecture by Professor Anderson.

As a finale to the tour a demonstration will be given of Knighttime with Jim Snyder on news, John Hansen on sports, a singing trio will provide entertainment, followed by devotions. This tour is designed to give the mothers an hour long glimpse into the everyday activities at PLU.

Luncheon Plans

Tomorrow at 12:30 a Mothers' Luncheon will be held, featuring a style show, and followed by a panel discussion. This event is being planned by Doris Johnson.

Saturday evening the mothers and daughters will be given a special section of the gymnasium where they may watch the basketball game.

Sunday's Events

Sunday will be the Bible hour and Student Congregation at the regular times, and the St. Olaf Choir Concert in the evening.

This year's schedule has been purposefully planned by chairman Virginia Lee and her committee, in order to allow extra time for the mothers to visit casually and see the part of college life they wish.

Valengrams on Sale

Once again the Spurs will be selling Valengrams for Valentine's Day. These will be delivered on Valentine's Day, during the dinner hour and, if not possible in the Cafeteria, they will be taken to the rooms or mail boxes of the recipients.

There will be three types of Valengrams, with different prices. Singing ones 15c, written 10c, and original ones, written by the sender, at 1c a word. Samples of what could be sent will be posted where they are sold.

Selling of Valengrams began yesterday and will continue today, tomorrow, and next Monday and Tuesday, during the lunch and dinner hours in the CUB.

at 7:00 p.m. each evening in the CMS chapel, Monday through Wednesday.

To Lead Devotions

Dr. Rogness will lead the campus in devotions on the Monday evening television program. During the rest of the week he will be speaking at the various dormitories during their evening devotions.

Anyone who wishes to meet with Dr. Rogness may do so during the afternoon from 1 to 3, Monday through Wednesday, when he will be available in room 125 in the Administration Building.

Graduate of Augustana

Dr. Rogness, a graduate of Augustana College and Luther Theological Seminary, was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity by Pacific Lutheran College in 1949. In 1954 he became the president of Luther Theological Seminary.

Willing to Criticize

Operating on the premise that students come to college to get an education, as the new editor of the Mooring Mast, I am forced to make some changes in its publication.

It seems strange that among a student body as large as ours, there are only a handful of people willing to work on the school paper, but such is the case. Dave Crowner, last semester's editor, tried to give the students the type and size of paper you should have, by inaugurating two additional pages. Unfortunately, the help necessary to put out this extra portion was available, but not willing, thus putting the work load on a few.

Knowledge of this situation has forced me to realize that, under present conditions, a good six page newspaper is not possible, without needless sacrifice of study time on the part of staff members. This semester I and my staff will attempt to bring to you, the student body, four-page editions of the best we have to offer. If this cut in pages does not meet with your approval I would be glad to discuss the situation with you, and welcome you to our staff, feeling that criticism in this case is a privilege of the willing.

Ann Haggart, editor

Dear Editor:

Dear Editor:

While in chapel the other day I was amazed to hear the administration announcing the $2.50 semester phone charge.

Whoever, I wonder, among us can afford twenty or thirty phone calls off campus every month must have enough money to continue this extravagant practice without much dent to his income or he would refrain from doing so. Viewed in the light of the relatively few students for whom this would be a boon, I tend to wonder if it isn't to assist the promotion of assets of this school, rather than to benefit the total student body.

I am quite sure I am not alone when I say that it would take a bit of thought to arrange for the twenty-seven phone calls necessary to the frugal individual to make this installation at least pay for itself, notwithstanding dividends! It seems to me in such few circumstances that would require this amount of outside calls (probably limited to special projects and committee work) a maximum of two of these phones per dormitory and a nominal fee of 25c per student per year would be a sufficient charge. After all, it is a dollar here and a dollar there, not one larger lump sum, which reduces the individual to near bankruptcy, leaves him wondering: "Now, where did that money go?" This is, unfortunately, true for most of the time.

In closing, I might add that my previous words should be completely unnecessary. The only fair policy in an institution anywhere in this country, I would think, would be to refer the issue to the students for voting since it is we, not the administration, who will be footing the bill (with least benefits) in the last analysis.

"The chess-board is the world, the pieces are its inhabitants, the rules of the game are what we call the laws of man. The player on the other side is hidden from us. We know that his play is not always fair, just, and patient. We also know, to our cost, that he never overlooks a mistake, or makes the smallest allowance for ignorance." Since the world's political position is becoming so complex and because every move which the United States or the Soviet Union makes has its ramifications upon the precarious balance of world power, I think the time has come for us to re-evaluate our foreign policy and bring it up to date.

Solberg Presents Facts for Rumors

Finals week is not famous for setting chapel attendance records, and Wednesday, January 25, was no exception. However, since Dr. Solberg, Dean of the Students, spoke in an effort to dispel the rumors flying around the campus, here are the facts before the handful of students present start spreading rumors about his talk on rumors!

Listening to the coffee shop and dining hall talk, one hears a vast amount of gripes and complaints about everything in general. However, none have been brought officially to the Dean of Students office, stated Dr. Solberg. This means no one has bothered to find out the facts or to see what could be done.

Dr. Solberg stressed the responsibility of each student as a most important factor. This responsibility is especially evident in the basic problems of rumors. Speaking specifically of a very controversial engagement party, Dr. Solberg stated, "I hope you people will become mature enough not to believe rumors!" then he went on to give the facts. The get-together in question made a great deal of noise, as all who heard it know. Parkland residents as far as ten blocks away had complained at the last party; this time someone from the community called the police. The captain at the station gave the orders, and the policeman who arrested the three students was doing his duty only. The charges were dropped this time because the boys didn't understand what could happen, but next time the Dean will not interfere. "You must be responsible for what you do!" advised Dr. Solberg.

To quell another rumor: The county department has warned the school that "No parking" signs in front of the dorms will be enforced. This is official and there is nothing the administration can do about it. The county controls the roads and the county is tired of seeing its parking signs violated.

The World in Chess

The Pieces

Africa, the Middle East, Latin America, and Asia have all become pawns in our game, being attacked from both the East and the West. A nationalistic tendency, intrinsic within each of these areas, demonstrates it can be extremely important, especially in light of the fact that the underdeveloped component parts of power control two-thirds of the world's natural resources.

I feel that it is quite remarkable that the Communists have been able to achieve the degree of success which they have in making countries subservient to them, but as I will show later on in this series, in each foreign country which the Communists have been able to control, they have helped the people to better themselves and naturally "a hungry person rarely bites the hand that feeds him." Because of their long range strategy the Soviet Union will portray the bishops in our game.

Of course with every attacker there must be a defender and this is the position which the United States and her allies have relegated to themselves, being like knights, hopping all over the board to try and stop an attack here, an offensive there. But let us not forget that any piece on a chess board can attack and many a game has been won by a good move of the knight.

Alliances since the first World War have come to play a leading role in the world and as we shall see, both sides use them and both sides have their troubles with them; Russia with Communist China and Yugoslavia, the United States with members of NATO, SEATO, CENTO, and the Pan American pact. Alliances, however, are still quite useful and will play the part of rooks in our game; the pieces with a long range effect, both offensively and defensively.

The queens are the most powerful pieces on the board as is the economic power of the East and West. Lenin in 1913 said, "Political institutions are a superstructure resting on an economic foundation," and Khrushchev has contended constantly that the Soviet Union will sink the U. S. economically, and of course President Kennedy is pushing for a faster economic development for the United States. It might be said that the world's power hinges on an economic battle.

Next we have the kings making their one move at a time. This will be portrayed by the Soviet Union and the United States' political and military power. Both are of consequence but they are still in the background.

Finale

The last article in this series will be titled "Checkmate" and will be an attempt to decide who wins—if anyone. Will world peace or world destruction be the finale? George C. Marshall said, "If man does find the solution for world peace it will be the most revolutionary reversal of his record ever known." But you know—it could happen.

(The next article will be entitled "The Pawns").

Picked Up Along the Way...

by Roy Olson, Public Relations

"I'm going to see the Dean and ask to be transferred out of that course. I just don't get anything out of that teacher." I picked this up along the way as I walked across the campus one day. It set me to thinking. Anything that can do that is all to the good.

The thought came to me that the fault might not all be that of the teacher. It just could be that this student had a slightly mixed up concept of what a teacher is for. He might have the same idea of a teacher as one student who defined a class lecture in this manner: "The process by which the notes of the professor become the notes of the student, without passing through the mind of either." I suppose there are teachers to be found whose concept of teaching does not go beyond that point. Let such a teacher have such a student, and certainly the process of learning becomes a deadening thing. Just soaking up information.

It is a part of the business of a teacher, of course, to supply information. But that is not the chief end to be sought. The ultimate end in view for a real teacher is to raise a thirst—intellectual thirst, that is. Because that has not always been the result explains why too many people complete a certain phase of formal education and everything ends there. No curiosity has been aroused which stimulates to further thinking and reading. A teacher can ram information down a student's intellectual innards, but he can't ram home a thirst. There has to be a response on the part of the student.

If you are having difficulty getting up any interest in a certain course from a certain teacher, you might ask yourself if you have just been an empty pail sitting there waiting for the teacher to turn on the faucet and fill you up. If so, and you fail to do something about it, you will find yourself on graduation day nothing more than such a process should be expected to accomplish—all wet!

3rd Floor B's Confident Of B Title, Western B's Sour

With four games remaining, the 3rd Floor B's have assured themselves a share of the B League crown if not all of it. Sporting the big 11-0 record they have completely dominated league play thus far. Their cross-hall rivals, the Nads, came within two points of dropping them early in the season and two other clubs have come within four points of an upset, but to no avail.

Western B, 3rd's toughest competitor this season, have fallen by the wayside since the loss of their good samaritan Cap Peterson midway through the season. Western is struggling to hold on to second place where they have rested all season.

3rd Floor 'Tipsters' Lead A's Into Semis

The 3rd Floor "Tipsters", who dopped two in a row the week before finals, have come back strong to sneak in front of Eastern for the first place berth. With overwhelming wins last week over Evergreen (96-48), and Western (90-72), the elbow benders have placed four of their starters in this week's top twenty. With three games remaining in league play they have yet to face second place Eastern (who edged them 43-42 in the 1st round), last place 4th Floor, and their arch-rival the 3rd Floor "M-Squad" (who dumped the Tipsters 48-37 in their 1st game). It is now mathematically possible for the championship to go to any of the seven teams, but realistically speaking the Tipsters, Eastern, Evergreen and Western are the principle contenders.

Knights Meet Western in Vital Series

NORM DAHL, who was expected to be out of action for several weeks with a broken finger, drives around his defensive men and scores two points in the Redland game. Wearing a heavy bandage, Dahl proved to be one of the outstanding players of the contest. The Knights won the game 97 to 80.

Second Place Vikings Meet Knights Twice

Western Washington's second place Vikings will attempt to halt PLU's resurgent Knights this weekend. Tonight the Lutes are on foreign soil up in Bellingham. Saturday the Lutherans host the Nordic invaders. Battle time for both games is 8 p.m.

The Vikings held tenaciously on to the runner-up berth after a split last week. UPS belted the Westerners 67-59 Friday.

Dick Nelson Sparks Lutes

Largely responsible for the Lutes' last five straight victories after a mid-season slump has been the strong performance of 5-11 starting guard, Dick Nelson. "Nellie," who has been an outstanding defensive player and hustler all season, has shown good scoring potential, hitting in double figures in every game of the latest PLU winning streak.

"Nellie," a sophomore at PLU, graduated from Richland High School where he was a star, two-letter winner in both baseball and basketball and a member of Richland's state AA Tournament team.

Dick is the third member of the Lutes' starting five who is married, having married a hometown Richland girl last summer. Dick is a pre-dentistry major, planning on continuing his education at the University of Washington. He lists fishing, hunting, bowling and golf among his many outside interests.

With the important Western series coming this weekend, "Diaper Dick" or "Baby-faced Nelson," as he is called by fans, may cause the Vikings considerable grief if his performance continues to help the Lutes improve on their 5-4 league record and chances to recapture the Evergreen Conference Crown.

Ski School For Students

The PLU Ski School began classes at White Pass last weekend with a turnout of about 30 students. Members of the PLU racing team are the instructors, and they are offering their knowledge and help to beginners, intermediates, and expert skiers alike.

If you are interested in joining the 50 odd Lutes who have already signed up for the lessons, contact Arnie Einmo or Keith Childs. It is definitely not too late to begin; six more lessons are scheduled between now and March 25, and if you begin this Saturday you will even have two lessons before the Winter Carnival at Mt. Hood. So, don't pass up this chance for some excellent exercise in the clean air of the mountains. Ask someone who is in the group—that should help you decide.

Financial Aid for Athletes-- Good or Bad for Athletics?

The Olympic Games have represented athletics since their origin in ancient Greece. The participant in these events did so solely for the action and stimulation that such competition offered. Monetary gain was not the motivating force. It is interesting to note that the discontinuation of the Olympics in 394 AD was marked by athletes receiving money for competing.

Somewhat in contrast to this ideal are today's college athletics and the widely publicized amounts of aid given to participating athletes. In some cases, this aid has proved harmful as some players will turn out or participate in sports for the money alone, not actually enjoying the competition. Suspending all aid would eliminate them, but it would also exclude the conscientious college prospect who wants an education, but needs some financial help.

Aid according to need, with excesses (convertibles, etc.) gone, could be a move to alleviate the basic problem—"play-for-pay" sports—also instructing even the star player in the necessary lesson of earning his way.

Athletes would be like other students, choosing their school primarily for the worth of the institution and the preparation offered there for later life. The caliber of the faculty (of course, the skill of the coaches) would be a greater factor than the aid they would receive.

Although many players are in sports for the thrill they receive from competing hard, the above mentioned proposal is in agreement with many schools of thought who wish to keep college athletics from any possibility of degeneration into professionalism. With aid reduced to minimum need, the competition could be protected to remain on the level where athletes strive for the highest jump or the longest throw rather than the longest car or the highest bank account.
