Looking Back At Homecoming '71

The Distinguished Alumnus Award was presented to Dorothy Meyer, missionary to India. Mary Harshman was named Alumnus of the Year. Returning alumni enjoyed a concert by the Temptations, a football game and a visit to the new Alumni House. Additional stories and photos — pp. 2, 3, 4, 8.

JoMarie Anderson's face reflects her delight after being crowned PLU Homecoming Queen for 1971. JoMarie, a junior from Renton, Wash., is majoring in music at PLU. Her parents are Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Anderson (Caroline Hoff '44) of Renton. Homecoming co-chairman Kirk Sandburg of Greeley, Colo., looks on.

PLU's Ira Hammon (21) rambles for yardage during the Homecoming football game. The vastly improved Lewis and Clark Pioneers edged the Lutes 38-36.

1971 Homecoming Highlights

Missionary Dorothy Meyer accepts the Distinguished Alumnus Award from Alumni Association President Roy Virak during the Homecoming Banquet at the University Center Nov. 6.

The Parade of Floats was one of the highlights of the Homecoming Game.

The Lady Lutes field hockey team (on offense) defeated the University of Puget Sound in the annual Homecoming Powder Puff game, 6-0.

PLU Alumni Honor Dorothy Meyer, Missionary To India For 20 Years

Dorothy Meyer

A man with three bedraggled small children at his side knocked on the door of a modest home in southern India one evening a few months ago.

Answering the door was Dorothy Meyer, an educator and evangelist in India for the past 20 years.

"I'm not a Christian," the man said, "and I have no money to give you. But I know that you love your fellow man and I hope that you will take care of these children."

Miss Meyer couldn't resist the three pairs of dark brown eyes gazing wistfully at her in the semi-darkness. "We don't have much room and we're short on funds," she told the father, "but we'll take them in and do the best we can for them."

The incident was not an uncommon one for Miss Meyer, a native of Kendrick, Idaho, who currently runs a mission complex in Nayadupet, Andre Predash, India. The complex includes an orphanage, an elementary school for girls, an industrial school for women, a home for widows and an institution for the aged. Since the late '40's she has spent most of her career in cities, villages and rural areas in southern India providing spiritual and educational guidance wherever she is needed.

On Nov. 6, Miss Meyer was recognized for her long service to the church and to humanity. A 1949 graduate of Pacific Lutheran University, she became the seventh person to receive the university's Distinguished Alumnus Award.

The presentation, which was made by Dr. Roy Virak, PLU Alumni Association president, highlighted the annual Alumni Homecoming Banquet at PLU. Announcement was also made of PLU's Alumnus of the Year Award for 1971, which will be presented to University of Washington basketball coach Marv Harshman later in the year.

Milton Nesvig, assistant to the president for church relations and publications at PLU, observed the mission program at Nayadupet first hand last year during an extended overseas tour.

"Not only has Miss Meyer provided a vital service to mankind throughout her own career, she has inspired others to help carry on the work," Rev. Nesvig said. Among those who have followed in her footsteps are her sister Hermina Meyer, a 1954 PLU graduate who has served in various medical capacities — nurse, laboratory technician, medical pathologist — since 1957, and Katakshamma Benjamin, an Indian young lady whose advanced education in America was underwritten by Miss Meyer and her family in Idaho.

The Meyer family and the veteran missionary were also responsible for the construction and financing of the Immanuel Chapel at Nayadupet, in memory of Herman Meyer, Miss Meyer's father.

The mission complex serves communities within a 150-mile radius of Madras in heavily populated southern India.

"Miss Meyer's life has been a saga of love and devotion," Nesvig said. "She has given of her time, talents and possessions for the cause of Christ and his Kingdom. She has touched the lives of thousands of India's populace and gained their admiration, respect and gratitude."

In addition to her bachelor's degree from PLU, Miss Meyer holds a master of religious education degree from New York Theological Seminary. A great deal of her turlough time over the years has been spent in furthering her education.

Lathrop Installed As University Minister At PLU

Dr. Clarence Solberg, left, performs installation rites for PLU's new university minister, Rev. Gordon Lathrop. Dr. Kent Knutson, center, delivered the installation sermon.

The Rev. Gordon Lathrop was installed as university minister at Pacific Lutheran University during a service of Holy Communion at PLU Sunday, Oct. 31.

Dr. Kent Knutson of Minneapolis, Minn., president of the American Lutheran Church, delivered the installation sermon. Dr. Knutson also spoke at a Reformation Day Rally in Olson Auditorium later in the afternoon.

Dr. Clarence Solberg of Seattle, bishop of the ALC North Pacific District, performed the installation rites.

Rev. Lathrop came to PLU in September from Darlington, Wisc., where he served as pastor of Grace Lutheran Church. He was ordained in Agoura, Calif., in 1969.

The new university minister received a bachelor of arts degree in philosophy from Occidental College, Los Angeles, in 1961, and a bachelor of divinity degree, cum laude, from Luther Theological Seminary, St. Paul, Minn., in 1966. He received a doctorandus, cum laude, in New Testament, Intertestamental Literature and Hermeneutics from Catholic University of Nijmegen, the Netherlands, in 1969.

State Students Attending PLU Qualify For Tuition Supplement

For the first time in Washington state history, a state resident attending a private university full-time may receive a state tuition supplement.

The 1971 legislature authorized the Council on Higher Education to provide up to $100 annually for each Washington resident attending a private institution in the state.

At Pacific Lutheran University, application forms for the state tuition grants have been sent to eligible students.

The total biennial appropriation granted by the legislature, $1.7 million, will be distributed annually to the state's accredited private institutions, based on the number of students who qualify for tuition supplements. This year's stipend provides $100 for each Washington state resident enrolled. No theology or graduate students will be accepted.

Students attending PLU will save about $140,000 in tuition costs as a result of the supplement. Ronald Coltom, '61 director of financial aid at PLU, estimates up to 1,500 students at that school will qualify for state tuition.

"This legislation also is intended to save money for taxpayers, added Coltom. If the 1,500 students affected by the supplemental grants were to attend state universities, it would cost the state 12 times more than the biennial appropriation for the tuition supplements at private schools."

New Honorary For Business Installed At PLU

A new chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, a national honor society for business administration, was installed at Pacific Lutheran University in October.

Charter members of the PLU chapter are all members of the business administration or economics faculties. They are Dr. Gundar King, Dr. Dwight Zulauf, Dr. John Martilla, Dr. Grant Watkinson, Stuart Bancroft, Charles Dirksen and Thomas Kruse.

The first student induction will be held in the spring, according to Martilla. Business administration majors in the top 10 per cent of the senior class and the top five per cent of the junior class will be eligible, he said.

Only schools accredited by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business are eligible for Beta Gamma Sigma chapters. AACSB last spring awarded its accreditation to the PLU School of Business Administration.

'Travelin' With Harv

Halfway

By Harvey Neufeld
Director of Alumni Relations

Near Salem, Oregon, on Interstate 5 stands an unusual highway sign board. It marks the mid-point between the North Pole and the Equator. No special thrill accrues for having passed this imaginary line, no electric shock, no sparkling revelation.

But it does jolt the mind into action. Halfway to the Equator, halfway from the ice-blue tundra of the North Pole! It could really be significant for some people, for example that flyer last week who was trying for a record around-the-world hop over the North and South Poles. Halfway would be a rather significant achievement for him.

Like a lot of halfway markers in our life it could have meaning of critical proportions. Are you 35 years of age? You are halfway through the average life span, at least for an American.

What has happened in your life up to this point? Of course you will have to answer that. The natural thing would be to suggest that we've not done as well as we had hoped, that our life has not measured up to what we expected. We could always dwell on the places that we had come from and of the things that were not done. Sometimes it's even kind of fun to do just that, to try to think about the old days, especially if we are not forced to re-live them. During Homecoming-71 one of our senior alums talked to me about "the bad old days". He didn't want to go back. He was content with the road ahead. He understood that nothing can be gained by dwelling on the past if it means that it clouds our enthusiasm for the future. Halfway — better to leave it at that.

There is something far more positive though about the midway point in life or in any project or goal that has captured our time and spirit. It is just this. Halfway means that there still remains much of the thrill of the journey. The next turn in the road displays a stunning scene, a hillside splashed in radiant fall color! So also in our daily routines. We've all got some long range plans and goals. Beautiful things that can happen at the next turn of the road. And this is the way it ought to be. These dreams and hopes give us perspective and help us from being frustrated by short range failures.

After all, a job half done is not the same as a half-done job. Ahead lies every opportunity to finish a task, redirect our life, complete a book, sing a new song, or whatever.

We look for great things from our alumni this year. The halfway markers are there to prod us on. Reflection is the key to our academic year at PLU. The greatest thing in this world is not so much where we are but what direction we are going. We believe we're heading in the right direction. Join us, won't you?

Reliving 'Typical' Weeks

By Dr. Eugene Wiegman
President, Pacific Lutheran University

on campus, attending a PLU home football game, and meeting with the State Department of Ecology regarding PLU's sewage treatment plant.

Sunday morning, Oct. 31, saw the installation of PLU's new university minister, the Rev. Gordon Lathrop. Bishop Clarence Solberg officiated at the installation, and Rev. Kent Knutson, President of the American Lutheran Church, delivered the sermon.

Following a luncheon for Rev. Lathrop, the university held a formal reception for President Knutson. Later in the afternoon, the Lutheran clergy from Pierce County joined President Knutson in celebrating the third annual Lutheran Reformation Rally in Olson Field-house.

Next, a few highlights from the week, November 1-7. There was a meeting with the faculty constitution committee, a past Regents' dinner, the Denver Symphony, a luncheon with the Tacoma Urban League on campus, a luncheon with the Tacoma Area Urban Coalition staff, and the usual flurry of meetings with individual students and faculty.

This particular week also included Homecoming Weekend. Homecoming offered me an excellent opportunity to renew friendships and make new acquaintances among our returning alums. There was an open house at the new Alumni Center, the football game on campus, a Homecoming banquet, and other traditional activities.

What about this week? In conjunction with Founders' Week, I

Successful '71 Homecoming Now Memory

By Roy Virak
President, PLU Alumni Association

"Homecoming 1971" is now history and memories. It was a great week end and I want to thank all of you who attended any or all of the various activities. Those of you who weren't able to make it, start planning for next year now. It will be one of the high spots of the year for you if you do.

The football game was full of spectacular action and excitement even though we lost by two points.

The banquet was a capacity crowd. It is so much fun to see old friends whom we haven't seen for years and to bring each other up to date on the families, successes and misfortunes that have befallen us since the last time we talked.

It was, of course, a very special privilege to present the Distinguished Alumnus Award to Dorothy Meyer on behalf of the Alumni Association in recognition of her twenty years of outstanding service in the mission field of India. Her life is an inspiration to all of us in our day to day Christian Stewardship.

Perhaps one disappointment of the evening was the fact that Marv Harshman could not be present to receive his award of Alumnus of the Year. He had some prior firm commitments relating to his new position as head basketball coach at the University of Washington and was out of the state that evening. However, arrangements have been made to present this award to him at the first University of Washington home game on December 1. If all the alums in the Seattle-Tacoma area would turn out, we could make it an unofficial "PLU" night as we congratulate Marv and wish him well in his new endeavor.

The Alumni House has really been a boon to the Association, and we are grateful to the University for providing it. We have actually had hundreds of visitors already. We have record of more visiting alums in the first two months of this year than any previous year. There were times during homecoming weekend that it was almost bulging. The plans for the changes that need to be made are both interesting and practical. The priority in which they are to be made has been established by the Board and work will proceed as soon as the funds become available. A portion of our annual fund is earmarked for this, but if anyone wants to make a special contribution, in memoriam etc., it will be very welcome and hasten our more efficient use of this facility. It would also make a unique and enduring tax deduction. Best wishes to all of you for a blessed and happy holiday season.

'Loyalty - 72'

"Loyalty-72." That will be the theme for the Annual Fund program of the Alumni Association this next year. An organizational meeting for the Annual Fund was held at the Alumni House Nov. 9 with Jim Feek as general chairman. Represented at this first committee meeting were members from geographic areas including Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, and the Mid-west. It was decided that each geographic area would be responsible for its own committee structure and for its share of the Annual Fund campaign.

A key goal of the "Loyalty-72" program will be an increase in the number of alums participating in annual giving. During the past two years approximately 20 per cent of the alumni have contributed to the on-going program at PLU. The committee set a goal of 40 per cent participation, which would mean the involvement of 2900 alums in the annual giving program next year.

Specific goals for which the fund will provide the necessary financial support were also considered. Scholarships and the renovation of the Alumni House were of prime concern. In addition to the continuing alumni scholarship program the committee voted to undergird the work of the Religious Life Council which will assume new quarters in the Alumni House building, to increase the endowment fund at the University, to underwrite a new video program that will provide the chapters with much needed tools in developing support.

In addition to these programs the fund will support the on-going work of the Alumni Association and especially provide some support for the current budget of the University, particularly faculty salaries support. Members of the committee are: Dr. Jeff Probstfield '63, Ken Hartvigson '65, Jerry Aust, Bob Running '65. The fund is slated to officially begin February 1st and the solicitation period end by May 30th. The overall financial goal of the fund will be $75,000.

INCOME FOR YOU NOW . . . FOR PLU LATER

Have you ever considered making a gift to Pacific Lutheran University which will give you or a loved one a guaranteed annual return of up to 10 per cent (depending on your age) in exchange for money or property?

Your gift can help us to offer a quality education within a Christian atmosphere while at the same time providing you the following benefits:

- An income which is guaranteed for you and/or your loved one for life.
- A charitable contribution which helps reduce your federal income tax.
- An income which is largely tax-free.
- Freedom from the worries of money management and the fluctuations of our economy.
- A way to either reduce or avoid probate, capital gains, and estate taxes.

For further information on this and other types of investments available to you through our program, please complete the form below and mail it to:

Barbara Reichert Kloke, PLU alumna and Puyallup public health nurse, was honored posthumously Oct. 3 when Good Samaritan Hospital bestowed her name upon its social work service center. A photograph of Mrs. Kloke hangs over the mantel in the Kloke Annex, where this picture was taken of her husband, Don, and her grandmother, Mrs. Ivar Swanson, who attended the dedication.

New Social Work Service Center Memorial To PLU Nursing Alumna

An alumna of Pacific Lutheran University's School of Nursing, Barbara Reichert Kloke, was honored posthumously Sunday, Oct. 3, when Good Samaritan Hospital of Puyallup dedicated its social work service center in her name.

Mrs. Kloke (nee Reichert) was born Jan. 30, 1946 at Mount Vernon, Wash., where she spent her early years. After graduation from Edison High School in Burlington, Wash., she attended PLU's School of Nursing, received her degree in 1968, and entered the public health field. Her service as a public health nurse in Puyallup was cut short by her death April 17, 1970.

The Reichert and Kloke families are widely known in the Skagit

Valley area, where friends joined them in setting up a memorial fund in the late Mrs. Kloke's name, contributing it to Good Samaritan Hospital and designating it for the establishment of a library for rehabilitation services.

Grover Shaunty, social work service director of the hospital, expressed the sentiments of his associates in these words:

"Barbara Reichert Kloke's commitment to her fellow human beings has inspired many of us to find new ways of meeting social, emotional, and health needs within our service area. It is an honor and a privilege to bestow her name upon our social work service center."

Women's Equality Topic Of AWS Convo At PLU

"Women's Equality — Where Will It Lead Us?" was the theme of the annual Associated Women

Students Tri-State Convention, which was held in Tacoma Oct. 15-16.

More than 100 women students from colleges and universities in five western states assembled at Pacific Lutheran University for the two days of sessions. They represented AWS chapters at state, private, community and junior colleges in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Alaska.

One of the highlights of the meeting was a talk by Frederick Storaaska entitled "To Be or Not To Be Raped: Prevention of Assaults on Women," which dealt with techniques of assault prevention and self-defense measures. Storaaska has lectured on the prevention of assaults on men, women and children to more than a quarter of a million students at 200 colleges in 36 states.

Pierce County District Court Judge Filis Otto was a featured guest during a panel discussion of women's rights. With her on the panel were Mrs. Mary Carlsen, wife of a University of Washington professor who is currently working on a special doctorate field of women's studies, and Mrs. Gisela Taber of Olympia, who has been involved in lobbying for women's rights.

Mrs. James Dolliver, whose family was chosen 1970 Washington State All-American Family, was guest speaker at the final conference event, a banquet in the University Center.

Purpose of the convention was to create an awareness of women's achievements and potentials and to "arouse interest" in the part that every individual can play in influencing needed changes, according to Claudia Barnes, convention chairman. Miss Barnes is a PLU senior from Spokane.

To Be Honored At Husky Game Marv Harshman Named PLU Alumnus Of The Year

Marv Harshman, head basketball coach at the University of Washington, has been selected Pacific Lutheran University Alumnus of the Year for 1971, alumni director Harvey Neufeld announced.

Harshman will be honored during "Marv Harshman Night" at the University of Washington's first home basketball game Wednesday, Dec. 1, Neufeld indicated. The game will be played in the UW Edmundson Pavilion at 8 p.m.

The presentation will be made by PLU President Eugene Wiegman and Alumni Association President Roy Virak.

Harshman, often rated PLU's greatest all-around athlete, graduated from PLU in 1942 after a phenomenal athletic career for the Lutes. He is best remembered, along with Marv Tommervik, as one of the "Marvelous Marvs" who starred on PLU's "Golden Age" football teams of 1939-41.

Harshman is still ranked as PLU's all-time winning basketball coach with 236 victories from 1945-58. His teams won or shared five Evergreen Conference championships and finished third in the NAIA tournament in Kansas City in 1957. He also coached Lute football from 1951-57.

For the past 13 years he has coached at Washington State University, where his basketball teams won 155 games before he moved to the University of Washington this fall.

Tickets for the Dec. 1 game may be purchased at the UW athletic ticket office or from Bradley Munn, PLU personnel director.

Gifts, Grants To PLU Near $1.5 Million This Year

Gifts and grants totaling $1,471,244 were received by Pacific Lutheran University in the fiscal year which ended July 31.

PLU President Eugene Wiegman made the announcement at the annual fall meeting of the PLU Board of Regents in October. He said that the gifts and grants for all purposes came from individuals, churches, businesses, foundations, government agencies and bequests.

At the meeting the Regents approved a revised operating budget of $8 million for the current school year. This represents a $500,000 increase over last year, Wiegman said.

The administration was instructed by the Regents to proceed on the schedule for changes in the sewerage system ordered by the State Board of Ecology.

It was reported that enrollment for the fall semester is 3,040 students.

Tributes To Gershwin, Miller Highlight Band Performance Nov. 30

Popular music favorites, symphonic works, marches and folk music will be featured when the Pacific Lutheran University Concert Band performs its tour homecoming concert at PLU Tuesday, Nov. 30.

Under the direction of Prof. Gordon O. Gilbertson, the 68-piece PLU touring band will appear in concert in Eastvold Auditorium at 8:15 pm.

Highlights of the complimentary program include a symphonic portrait of George Gershwin tunes in tribute to Gershwin, one of America's musical geniuses. All-time favorites include "Summertime," "Bess, You Is My Woman Now," and "It Ain't Necessarily So" from Porgy and Bess and "They Can't Take That Away From Me," "Love Is Here To Stay" and "A Foggy Day." The tribute was arranged by Bruce Chase.

A second musical tribute, this time to Glenn Miller, is arranged by Henry Gass and recalls the "era of the big bands." It includes such famous hits as "Tuxedo Junction," "Jersey Bounce," "American Patrol" and "Little Brown Jug."

A notable arrangement of Bach's "Fantasia and Fugue," originally conceived by the composer as a piece for baroque organ, comes midway through the first half of the program. The concert opens with "Fanfare, Chorale and Fugue" by Caesar Giovannini. A contemporary composition by Paul Creston, based on ancient Finnish folksongs, "Kalevala," follows, as does "Fugue and Chorale on Yankee Doodle" by Virgil Thompson, a piece originally scored for a movie.

Another historic tune is "Echo Concerto," written in the 17th Century.

Also included on the program are "Praise The Lord With Drums and Cymbals," a Sabbath music piece; "Invocation and Ritual Dance" by Philip Gordon; Shostakovich's "Polka" and "Astro-Rock" by Ron Roullier.

According to Professor Gilbertson, one of the Northwest's leading collegiate band directors, the program has been selected to provide "music for listening; to be enjoyed by young and old alike."

PLU President Eugene Wiegman, left, and American Lutheran Church President Dr. Kent Knutson confer prior to the Reformation Day Rally at PLU Oct. 31. The program was co-sponsored by the Tacoma-Pierce County Lutheran Pastor's Association and PLU.

Annual Christmas Festival Concert Set Dec. 10-12

The Pacific Lutheran University Choir of the West, University Symphony Orchestra, University Chorale and University Singers will be featured during the annual Christmas Festival Concert at PLU Dec. 10-12.

The program, sponsored by the PLU School of Fine Arts, will be presented in Olson Auditorium each evening, Friday through Sunday, at 8:15 p.m.

One of the highlights of the program will be the performance of Antonio Vivaldi's "Gloria" for mixed chorus, orchestra and soloists.

The Choir of the West is under the direction of Maurice Skones. Jerry Kracht will conduct the University Symphony Orchestra and Edward Harmic will direct the University Chorale and University Singers.

Tickets may be obtained free of charge by writing Christmas Concert, Pacific Lutheran University, Tacoma, Wash., 98447, or by calling LE 1-6900, ext. 453. Tickets will also be available at the University Center information desk.

Please indicate the evening on which you plan to attend when you make your ticket request.

ALC President Dr. Kent Knutson Attacks Secularism During Reformation Rally Sermon At PLU

The decline in birth rate and the growth of secularism are contributing to the slow down in growth of the Christian church in America, according to the Rev. Dr. Kent S. Knutson of Minneapolis, president of the 2.5 million member American Lutheran Church.

In Tacoma Sunday, Oct. 31, to address a Reformation festival at PLU, Dr. Knutson said there are fewer people from age 0-4 in the church today than there are over 70. "On the other hand," he stated, "the largest group of church members today are in the 15 to 20 age group which belies the criticism that modern youth are irreligious."

Characterizing the growth of secularism as "insidious" and a

"sickness of society," Dr. Knutson said that man has become so proud of himself and his accomplishments, such as the journeys into space, that he is drifting away from the church.

But this trend can be reversed, Dr. Knutson feels. "I sense a new esprit d'corps emerging in the church through the lay movement and from youth."

Speaking on "The Unfinished Reformation" to over 2,000 persons in Olson Auditorium, Dr. Knutson said that the spiritual forces unleashed in the 16th Century shaped the modern world and that the challenge to the Christian church today is to use these forces to combat the growing secularism in society.

Teachers Graduating From PLU Make Best Of Bleak Employment Situation Nationwide

In a year when colleges and universities across the country are still struggling to find teaching jobs for the majority of last year's graduates in education, well over half of Pacific Lutheran University's 1970-71 teacher candidates are currently employed in teaching positions, according to John Hanson, '62 director of teacher placement at PLU.

Of the 248 teachers who were certified by PLU this year, 144 (58 per cent) are busy preparing daily lessons in school districts as far away as Laos and as near as Franklin Pierce.

"This year's placement is about 10 per cent below the mark we reached last year when 163 of 239 candidates found jobs, and in a normal year we may place from 80 to 90 per cent of our graduates in teaching positions," Hanson said.

"To say that 105 teachers have not signed teaching contracts is a bit misleading. A number of these had no intention of teaching immediately. Many have gone on to graduate school while others have entered business or joined the service. We actually have 45 candidates (19 per cent) still actively seeking positions," he noted.

"Though I certainly can't call 58 per cent employment a smashing success for our teacher placement program, I feel that the mark does reflect the high degree of confidence placed in our teacher graduates by many school districts throughout the Northwest," he continued. "On a statewide basis, only 42 per cent of the teachers certified by the State Department of Instruction in 1969-70 found teaching jobs, and I expect this year's figure to be considerably below that."

One hundred sixty-one women and 88 men earned certification through the School of Education at PLU this year, and contracts were signed by 98 women and 46 men.

The majority of the new teachers (109) found jobs in Washington, though others found positions as far away as Vientiane, Laos. Twelve teachers were placed in Oregon, and others accepted positions in Arizona, Alaska, California, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Maryland, Montana, New Jersey, North Dakota and Michigan.

"This has been a rather unusual year," Hanson said. "In a normal year nearly all of our candidates who are seriously seeking positions would have signed teaching contracts by the end of June. This year's placement continues at an erratic pace even at the present time. A week doesn't pass when from one to a half dozen of last year's graduates find jobs as teachers."

He added, "Persistence and determination are the two biggest factors contributing to a candidate's success in finding a job. It is not uncommon for a teacher to apply in as many as 25 different districts before finally landing a position. One of our social studies candidates applied in 62 school districts before signing a contract in Elkton, Md."

The number of candidates earning elementary certification, 121, was identical to the number earning certification on the secondary level. A greater portion of the elementary candidates went into education, with 82 finding teaching positions. Fifty-five secondary candidates and all five K-12 music teachers were hired.

Over half of the secondary candidates still seeking teaching jobs majored in one of two teaching fields, 23 in social studies and 16 in English.

On the other hand, the life and earth sciences and vocal and instrumental music areas had significantly higher employment ratios. "It looks like the sciences and math will continue as fields of high employment on the secondary level," observed Hanson. "The demand for teachers in these fields is above average throughout America and in numerous foreign countries."

Hanson listed several reasons for the sudden drop in the job market for teachers. Among the most popular explanations is that the large number of students graduating in education now reflects the post World War II baby boom. Many of these students began their teacher training when there was still a demanding shortage of adequately prepared teachers.

This significant increase in the number of teacher education graduates, coupled with a sharp drop in the birthrate during the 1960's, flooded the employment picture at a time when enrollment on the elementary school level was decreasing, he indicated.

For example, Hanson pointed out, the Tacoma School District's enrollment on the elementary level was down in excess of 1,000 students from last year. There was a drop of 290 youngsters in kindergarten alone.

First grade enrollment in Spokane has dropped to its lowest level in 20 years, and this fall Seattle enrolled over 4,500 fewer students than last year.

"Some good may come from the current situation. Hopefully school boards will capitalize on the increased number of well-qualified beginning teachers to decrease class sizes and increase the general quality of educational programs," Hanson said.

Hanson also believes that PLU graduates have an advantage because of the balance in the School of Education program between in-field experience and theory. "Our students experience actual in-school teaching situations as early as their sophomore year," he said.

"In addition," he observed, "we can't overlook the fact that most public school administrators aren't looking for 'radicals.' PLU so far has established a reputation for balance between liberal and conservative philosophies."

Alumni Annual Giving Exceeds $70,000 — '70-'71

Total gifts and grants received by PLU from alumni during 1970-71 amounted to $70,227.64, according to alumni director Harvey Neufeld.

In a recent report it was announced that the annual PLU Alumni Association fund had reached a total of $41,896.81. However, Neufeld indicated, many alums are involved in a giving program other than or in addition to the annual fund.

For example, he said, the new Nursing-Art Complex construction and remodeling project has received considerable support from alumni in the medical profession. In addition, scholarship support, endowment fund gifts and library pledge payments swelled total giving from members of the Alumni Association to the grand total figure in excess of $70,000, according to Neufeld.

'Christmas Carol', Sing-A-Long Set For Wed., Dec. 8

In something like a return to "Christmas past," Pacific Lutheran University will present its traditional performance of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," Wednesday, Dec. 8, but with something new added.

Program director William Parker, assistant professor of communication arts, has added a Christmas carol sing-a-long and a reading of the Christmas story to the annual dramatic program.

The singing, which includes audience participation, soloists and chorus music, will be led by the Curtain Call Chorus.

Highlight of the program, which will be held in Eastvold Auditorium at 8:15 p.m., will be the annual performance of Dickens' Christmas classic. Now in its 30th year at PLU, the production was originated in 1941 by Theodore O. H. Karl, now chairman of the Department of Communication Arts.

"A Christmas Carol" will feature an entirely new cast this year.

PLU Plans 24th Annual Lucia Bride Festival

Pacific Lutheran University will plunge into the Christmas spirit Friday, Dec. 3, with its 24th annual Lucia Bride Festival and the lighting of a 110-foot tree on campus.

The Lucia Bride festivities will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Eastvold Auditorium and be followed by the tree lighting and a reception in the University Center.

Craig Huisenga, student body president, will place a seven-candle crown on the head of the girl selected by students to reign over the festival.

The festival, a pre-Christmas tradition in Sweden, is sponsored on campus by Spurs, a national sophomore women's honorary society.

'Primitive?' Art Awareness Program Underway

"Primitive?" is the theme of a six-week art awareness program at Pacific Lutheran University which will continue through Dec. 15. The program includes exhibitions of art and photography, film exhibitions, and a radio program series.

A photography exhibition opened on Nov. 6 is the first feature of the coordinated visual art education program sponsored by the University Gallery. Photos and text on Africa, prepared by Mrs. William J. Lahr, director of education at the Seattle Art Museum, will be on display in the main Mortvedt Library lobby for the duration of the "Primitive?" show.

Theme of the display is "West Africa, Yesterday and Today."

Highlight of the program is a collection of 120 primitive art pieces representing cultures in New Guinea, Africa, Mexico and the northwest United States, scheduled for display in the University Gallery Nov. 10-Dec. 15. The exhibition, assembled by Keith Achepohl, PLU director of exhibitions, includes loaned pieces from Dr. and Mrs. L. H. Lehmann and Nimba Gallery, Seattle; Lawrence Tyler, Artifacts, Seattle; the Portland Art Museum, the State Capitol Museum in Olympia, and Mr. and Mrs. David Keyes and Mr. and Mrs. Achepohl of Tacoma.

A film exhibition is scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 9, in the Art Building Gallery at PLU. Featured films include "Rhythm of Africa" and "The Hunters." Program begins at 7:30 p.m.

Radio programs investigating the scientific and social implications of primitive cultures, including the subjects of sorcery and witchcraft, will be broadcast over KPLU-FM, campus radio, on Mondays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. for the duration of the "Primitive?" program.

Svare's Art Depicts Christianity in Media Commercials

Christianity is a symbol complex. People relate to Christianity through symbols.

Christ was real; it is His life that is the message. And yet, most often, he is but a symbol, related to other symbols: the Christian social structure, the church, Christian history, doctrine and the New Testament.

Craig Vista Svare

"Stars and Stripes"

"Christ and Mary Magdelene"

Though even so renowned a theologian as Paul Tillich has suggested that symbols must be revitalized to be relevant to their own time, most Christians still relate to Christianity in symbols of 2,000 years ago.

During his time on Earth, Christ used symbols relevant to his own time, such as the Parables. Today, the most prominent symbols are provided by the media through advertising and commercials.

Upon an elaboration of these premises, Craig Svare '66 developed a one-man show of original collographs, etchings and woodcuts, which was exhibited in Berkeley, Calif., in August and at the University of Southern California in October.

The show, "For God and Country," was Svare's master's thesis project at the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley. He is currently studying for a doctorate in religion and the arts at the G.T.U. after a year's internship as assistant to the university chaplain at U.S.C.

Since his graduation from PLU, Svare has studied English at the University of Washington, Oxford University and Balloil College and studied printmaking at the San Francisco Art Institute. He has pursued theological studies at G.T.U. and Pacific Lutheran Theological Seminary.

Svare asserts that today the media plays upon the needs of the people to sell a product. As people have spiritual as well as physical needs, he has endeavored to present Christ as a commercial message and says it works.

Commercial jingles seem to be appropriate to the Christian message in some cases, and inversely, certain of Christ's teachings have the ring of a media commercial, Svare believes.

"My show is about taking Christianity and communicating it through symbols of the contemporary media," he says. "It picks up on the 'sign-symbols' in the media which express contemporary spiritual needs and juxtaposes them with Biblical symbols."

Because the media is the result of a culture that has been based on Christianity, the media is still talking about Christianity, Svare maintains. He has put contemporary words with Biblical symbols and has found that they fit.

"You have to keep changing the symbols so people will understand," Svare says.

It's worth thinking about.

Some PLU Students Underrate Selves, School, Graduate Believes

By Tom Gumprecht

(Tom Gumprecht is a 1971 graduate of PLU who is currently attending medical school at the University of Washington. He has submitted this article describing life at med school as it relates to undergraduate education at PLU. There is, of course, a rather substantial contingent of PLU graduates associated with the Health Sciences Division of the U. of W.)

Tom Gumprecht

As I look back at my undergraduate years, I recall one attitude associated with PLU which I did not particularly care for then, and one which I dislike even more now. That attitude is one which implies that Pacific Lutheran University is a "closed institution," a "monastery," a "Sunday School" and that PLU is something less than a university.

It is an attitude which says that because one attends a church-related school, a school with a strong Scandinavian-Lutheran heritage, he is somehow ill-prepared to meet the challenges of the "big world outside."

Well, I have graduated to the bigger school, to the "big world outside" and have a certain opportunity to see whether this attitude toward PLU is justified.

I find that the attitude just described is a somewhat naive attitude. It is an attitude which underestimates the students of Pacific Lutheran University — underestimates their abilities, their perceptiveness, and their concern.

Similarly, this attitude underestimates the institution of PLU and its ability to teach its students about, and prepare them for, the "big world outside."

Further, this naive attitude, which relegates PLU to some lower educational position, can be harmful if it leads people to overlook PLU's good and somewhat unique qualities which can help equip a person for the future.

It can also be harmful as an attitude if, as I have seen in some, it leads one to overlook the great opportunities PLU has for involvement with one's fellow Christians, with God, and with mankind in general.

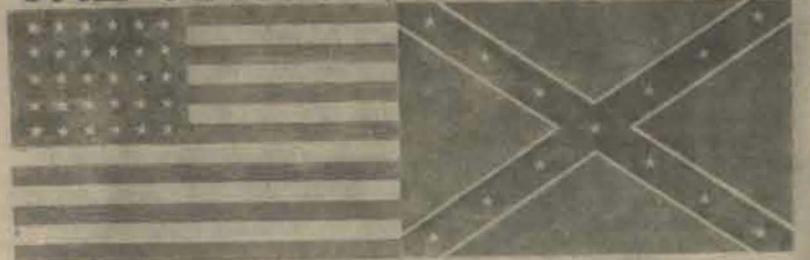

From my observations here at the U. of W., I have concluded that PLU graduates are as well prepared academically, professionally, socially and so forth as people from any other institution. It seems to me that Pacific Lutheran grads relate rather well to their colleagues, their patients, and the myriad of other peoples one finds here at the U. of W., Health Sciences Complex.

It has been my experience that there is no reason to apologize for having attended PLU. In general, PLU graduates are well regarded here.

Maybe, then, we should ask why PLU grads relate well to other people, to the rest of the "big outside world." It appears to me that many PLU graduates have a somewhat greater sense of direction and values than other people. I recall that my pre-medical advisor at PLU once said that he took pride in helping prepare pre-professional students who care. Perhaps with these graduates, Pacific Lutheran University was able to "confront them with the challenges of the Christian faith and instill in them a true sense of vocation."

Possibly, PLU helped instill values in some of us graduates which are firmer and more substantial than those of our fellows. Our involvement with PLU may indeed have given some of us a firmer foundation on which we may face the "outside world" and the future.

Ostenson to Take Over Development Council Post

The Seattle-King County Economic Development Council recently named its new chief staff executive.

He is William H. Ostenson ('61), who came early in November from a post as executive secretary and chief administration officer for the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority.

EDC President Norton Clapp said in his new role Ostenson will be responsible for initiating council economic development projects, and creating an atmosphere in the community "Conducive to economic expansion," as well as assist staff members. The council was established earlier this year to lead the area's economic revival.

The council's current operations are being funded by a technical assistance grant from the Economic Development Administration.

Ostenson graduated from PLU, has a master's degree from Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, and a law degree from Willamette University, Salem, Ore.

Lute Gridders Share NWC Crown In Spite Of Up-Down Season

Northwest small college football was a prognosticator's nightmare this season.

Pre-season favorites folded early and then returned in spoiler's roles. Dark horses were riding high early in the season, then stumbled. As the season drew to a close, there were no dominating teams. Western Washington boasted a 7-2 mark, but was defeated by PLU and UPS, both of whom lost to also-ran Lewis and Clark.

PLU did not escape the prevailing trend. The season opened with a promising 15-7 victory over Western with the Knights scoring twice in the last eight minutes. But the Lutes suffered the first of several disappointments at UPS' Baker Field. The score was UPS 35, PLU 18.

During the month of October, Roy Carlson's charges enjoyed an unbroken string of successes, beginning with an 11-10 pressure victory over Pacific on a final minute touchdown and two-point conversion. Then came the scoring bonanza which has become traditional in PLU-Whitman battles, and the Lutes knocked the Missionaries (4-0) off the nationally-ranked and undefeated list, 50-42.

If the season were a predictable one, the next two Lute victories could be considered predictable: an 18-0 victory over Willamette and a 38-0 shutout of College of Idaho. The Lutes were assured of a tie for the Northwest Conference title, and it seemed the defense had come of age.

But the Lewis and Clark Pioneers, winless in NWC play but with probably the most explosive offensive potential in the Northwest, put it all together to stop the Lutes 38-36 at PLU's Homecoming.

The November slump continued in the ankle-deep mud at McMinnville, Ore., as the Lutes absorbed a 24-14 loss to Linfield. Carlson's offense, keyed to options and aerials, was at a distinct disadvantage against the Wildcats' quick-hitting attack.

The season comes to an end this weekend in balmy southern California against the California Lutheran College Kingsmen, undefeated and nationally ranked.

It was easy to point to two or three breaks in each losing contest that might have reversed the decisions, but the same could probably have been claimed from the other side of the field after the Western, Pacific and Whitman victories.

The season, nevertheless, should be considered successful in what was originally diagnosed as a rebuilding year. For the first time since 1939-41, PLU has enjoyed three straight winning seasons and has had at least a share of two conference titles.

Next year PLU will miss the services of Jim Hadland, one of the region's top quarterbacks for the past three years, and Carlson will have to fill the line shoes of Steve Harshman, Dennis Hillesland, Gary Huntington, Keith Koehn and Stan Pietras. But it appears he has a greater nucleus of returnees for next year than he had before the current season began.

Hadland broke Marv Tommervik's single game passing record in the Lewis and Clark battle, and made a determined run at Marvelous Marv's season passing and total offense marks.

In many ways, this unheralded 1971 Lute squad was as exciting as the veteran offensive machines of the past two years.

PLU Shoots For 25th Straight Winning Cage Season With Vet Team

By Jim Kittilsby

Traveling to Kansas City could be a relatively routine adventure if it were not for all the pit stops en route.

And so it is in this NAIA basketball hotbed, where Pacific Lutheran, defending champion of the Northwest Conference, finds inhospitable cities standing in the way of an appearance at the national tournament.

It would be very easy to get waylaid in Spokane, Portland, Salem, McMinnville, or Ellensburg.

With nine veterans returning from last year's squad, which posted a 15-14 record overall, 10-2 in NWC play, there is little question about the caliber of talent Coach Gene Lundgaard will have to work with.

Speaking in tones of guarded optimism, Lundgaard feels that last season's 15-14 record should be improved upon and that a repeat of last December's lowly 2-7 mark is unlikely. However, a tough schedule and injuries have been known to shatter dreams.

The Lutes don't get all the breaks, but they got one they weren't looking for. Floor general and team captain Lyle McIntosh suffered a broken ankle in a pre-season pickup game and will be out of action until at least mid-January.

PLU, who fell three points short of receiving the Kansas City tickets last year, losing two out of three playoff games to Central, will have size, experience, and depth as its greatest assets this season.

Pouring 2374 points through the iron last year, a school record, the Lutes should again set a torrid scoring pace. In NWC action, PLU averaged 87.8 points per game and yielded only 72.8, both league bests, while hitting on .464 of their shots.

Without a bonafide star player, the Lutes are well balanced and can open with a front line averaging 6-8.

The Lutes will again build their offense around all-conference center Ake Palm. The 6-8 Swede averaged 16 points a game last year and was the loop's fourth leading scorer. His six game absence in December with a leg injury contributed to the Lutes' lacklustre start.

One of seven seniors, Ake joined the exclusive 1,000 career point club last year and, with 1,037 counters, is eleventh on PLU's all-time scoring list. He could easily move into the number five spot this season.

Dennis Phillips (6-8) and Roger Wiley (6-7), juniors, could come on strong. Phillips, with a Midas shooting touch, sank 60.9 per cent of his shots, best in the league. Wiley was the third leading scorer in his first varsity season. His 35 point bombardment against College of Idaho was the best individual effort of the year for the Lutes.

Forwards Terry Finseth and Mike Willis, 6-4 seniors, will be programmed for plenty of action. Finseth, with good all-around ability, is a streak shooter while Willis' chief assets are speed and jumping ability.

Senior Don Lehmen, a 6-2 transfer from Western, is a potential starter. A solid defensive player and rebounder, Lehmen played at Tacoma Community College with leading guard candidates, Tom Patnode and Don Martonik, also seniors.

Patnode, 5-8, was the leading point producer last year with 360 tallies, a 12.8 average. Patnode could be paired with Don Martonik, 5-11, perhaps the top outside shooter on the squad.

With the 6-0 McIntosh temporarily sidelined, 6-4 Bruce Willis, son of Howard Willis '48, and Elizabeth (Stuen '44), will be called on with greater frequency to stabilize the floor game. Neal Andersen (6-1), brother of former Lute Mark '67, Dick Dary (5-11), and Randy Leeland (5-10), brother of another former Lute, Doug '67, are up from the frosh team and are the guards of the future.

Top frosh prospects include ('59) Roger's brother Scott Iverson, 6-0 guard from Mt. Tahoma (Tacoma), Mike Berger, 6-6 forward from Curtis (Tacoma), and Don Rowberg (6-6) forward from Spokane.

PLU Harriers Winless But Knapp Excels

Courses were long and so was the season for Coach Jon Thiemann's cross country corps, winless in dual and triangular competition, fifth place finishers in the Northwest Conference and sixth in NAIA District 1.

Lute freshman Kevin Knapp of Rogers High School in Puyallup monopolized individual honors for PLU and was named to the NWC All-Star team.

Knapp, after an inauspicious 25th place finish at the George Fox Invitational, went on to lead the pack in dual meets with Pacific, Willamette, and Western. In the Lewis & Clark triangular meet and Whitman dual contest, Knapp placed second.

Knapp, whose 22:16 four mile clocking at Willamette was within 27 seconds of the course record, went on to place fifth in the NWC and came in 15th at the NAIA District meet.

PLU Basketball Season Tickets Rated Bargain

To one-up the President's freeze on prices, the cost of basketball entertainment has lowered at Pacific Lutheran University.

It's possible, through the purchase of season tickets, to get a better deal than in 1970-71 — and that was quite a bargain.

The price remains the same, $20.00 per seat, but the number of home games has increased from twelve to thirteen. Thus, season tickets represent a $12.50 reduction under the established daily price of $2.50 per ticket. The reserved section, with padded seats and backrests throughout, is at mid-court in the lower stands.

For ticket information on the defending Northwest Conference champions, who open their home season Dec. 4 against Seattle Pacific, call or write the PLU Athletic Department.
