

Observe P. L. C. Nite At Memorial Church

Choir, Mikkelsen Sing; Tingelstad, Dahl Speak; Guests at Social Hour After Program

With the Reverend M. Lono presiding, the Luther Memorial Church of Tacoma, observed Pacific Lutheran College Night on Friday, December 4.

Participating in the program were people connected in some way with the College. The College Choir sang two groups of songs and Anna Mikkelsen, accompanied by Ruth Howard, sang two solos.

Miss Irene Dahl, a former student of the College, gave a talk in which she pointed out the value of religious schools at the present time. Mr. E. Tingelstad, the managing editor of the Pacific Lutheran Herald, spoke in behalf of the paper, a publication of the board of trustees of the College.

President Tingelstad gave the address of the evening on the subject of "Brass Tacks." He stressed the urgent needs of the College since the requirements for accreditation had been raised, and the fact that these needs must be met if the institution is to continue.

The representatives of the College, who were the guests of honor for the evening, enjoyed the social hour which followed the meeting.

Brush Prairie Convention Inspiring and Successful

Irene Dahl Conducts Institute, E. Tingelstad Toastmaster

At the annual convention of the Oregon Circuit Luther League, held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, November 27-29, at Brush Prairie, Washington, Walter Christensen, of Astoria, and formerly a student of Pacific Lutheran College, was elected president. Puget Island, Washington, was chosen for the 1932 convention.

The convention opened Friday evening with the key-note address by Reverend M. Lono, pastor of Luther Memorial Church, Tacoma. His topic was "Luther's Message for the Church of Tomorrow."

Mr. E. Tingelstad, editor of the Pacific Lutheran Herald acted as toastmaster at the convention banquet, served on Saturday by the ladies of Brush Prairie Church in the social parlors of the church. Miss Irene Dahl, president of the South Puget Sound Circuit League, conducted the convention institute.

Saturday evening Mr. E. Tingelstad gave the concluding rally address of the convention on the topic "Why I am a Lutheran," pointing out fourteen reasons why intelligent Christians find peace and satisfaction in adhering to the Lutheran Church.

The opinion prevailed among visitors and delegates that the convention was a blessing and a success. Catching the spirit and sharing in the enthusiasm of the convention one was inspired to believe that the Lutheran Church of tomorrow is in safe and able hands.

Foreign-Language Students Hold Meetings During Noon

In order to supplement the classroom vocabulary, Mrs. Bondy's students of German are meeting on Wednesdays during the noon hour to eat their lunch together.

The French students meet on Thursdays for the same purpose. The English language is barred—games, conversations, and songs are in the language of the group of students meeting. Anyone who has taken either German or French is invited to take part in these meetings.

Minneapolis Pastor Speaks at College

Rev. Wendell Expresses Pleasure Over Visit; Carries Greetings East

"In the turmoil of this steady stream of life don't lose sight of that Great Rock which was the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow. That alone will support you safely." With these words Dr. C. A. Wendell, pastor of the University Lutheran Church of Minneapolis, Minnesota, addressed the students and faculty of Pacific Lutheran College in the regular chapel services Tuesday morning, December 1.

Rev. Wendell gave an inspiring talk on the profound importance of faith. "Faith is explicit confidence, trust, and fidelity which remains unshaken in all instances. It is not an opinion. Pity the man who has not outgrown his childhood opinions, but more to be pitied is the man who has outgrown his childhood faith."

Having heard much about Pacific Lutheran College, Rev. Wendell expressed his pleasure at having an opportunity to pay it a visit, and felt that half its glory hadn't been told.

He gladly consented to carry out the three wishes of President Tingelstad to carry back East greetings to Rev. C. S. Thorpe, to explain the aims of Pacific Lutheran College, and to extend a greeting from Pacific Lutheran College to his congregation.

This greeting, he informed the audience, will be made a part of the greetings to be telegraphed from the Lutheran Student Association Convention.

Former Member of Mooring Mast Staff Relates Experiences

There is an old saying "You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink." I imagine that this also applies to mules and human beings.

Anyway, when I was an honored member of the Mooring Mast staff, with regular assignments, I could find simply nothing to write about. And as for getting assignments in on time—well, that was an absolute impossibility.

But now that I have deserted the ranks of reporters, I feel a dynamic urge to express my soul through the medium of my pen. In every frown and giggle I sense a dramatic plot, in every withered leaf an inspiration, in every professor's tirade a grand and glorious opportunity for subtle, irking sarcasm.

Methods that now that I have forsaken the editorial roost, I shall be able to offer our esteemed publication more satisfactory and more timely service.

"You can lead a donkey to work, but you can't make him do it."

Rev. A. M. Skindlov At Chapel Service

Discusses "Stick-to-it-iveness." Pleased to Learn That School Makes Splendid Progress

Reverend A. M. Skindlov, president of the Rocky Mountain District of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America, visited the College and spoke in the chapel exercises on Tuesday, December 8.

"Stick-to-it-iveness" was the subject on which Rev. Skindlov spoke. He said: "If you are able to digest and appropriate in a practical way what is being taught by your Christian professors you will get ahead. Don't permit discouragements to conquer. He who sticks to it will succeed."

"Moments spent at Pacific Lutheran College are precious. You are fortunate to be able to attend such a school as this one. It is up to each one of you to make the best of your time, and to help build a better Pacific Lutheran College. True education means to our moral and spiritual life what the sun means to the black earth. What would this earth be without the sun? What would this earth be without Christian education?"

Rev. Skindlov said he was pleased to know that we are making such splendid progress at the College after having had such a hard beginning.

Silence Is Really Golden But There Is Sometimes Room for a Little Noise

"Silence is golden"—well, maybe. Then a corpse would be rich company. You are surprised? Isn't a corpse silent?

But what would our country have done if Pat Henry hadn't puffed out his chest and roared "Give me liberty or give me death" Where would our patriotic spirit wander to die in peace if we couldn't raise our voices lustily and yodel our national anthem?

Wouldn't a football game be exciting if all the spectators watched in silence as the players wigwagged their signals from one side to another?

"Silence is golden." We are not unappreciative, really. How we sometimes wish more people would believe that saying. And how we would like to convince our alarm clocks that they are merely cheap tin when they rouse us from our slumbers on some cold morning. Would, also, that some of these people who insist on trying to send us to a mad-house by their nasal and discordant choruses would heed this old proverb.

There is another pithy saying—"All things come to him who waits." So, perhaps, if we wait long enough we will find some way of striking a happy medium and say, "Indulge not to excess in the gentle art of speech, neither abstain from all outward show of animosity through thy vocal cords; enough is plenty."

Paul G. Schmidt, manager of the St. Olaf Choir of Northfield, Minnesota, announces that arrangements have just been completed for the fourth Lutheran European tour which is to take place in the summer of 1932.

He will soon have ready for distribution a circular describing the tour in detail.

TALENTS AND TALENTS

It seems to be a very popular idea among students in American schools that such institutions are mainly maintained for the purpose of providing several years of painless, worry-free living for the lucky undergraduate. It is surprising to see how many neglect to utilize their advantages and possible opportunities, and only run amuck endeavoring to get as much "fun" out of their school life as possible.

It is very questionable whether such an attitude is the correct one to take, whether such an attitude is really compatible with a truly Christian viewpoint. The good Lord gave us each special talents and aptitudes, which He intends us to use in the furthering of His kingdom. If we neglect to develop these talents and aptitudes, we are like the man in the parable, who took his talent and buried it, and when his Lord came to him after a long absence and demanded of him the money, he returned the same unchanged. And the Lord punished this slothful servant, because he had neglected to work in his Lord's interest. But the diligent servants, who improved their talents and increased them manifold, were richly blessed.

We can sin as easily by neglect as by misdeed, we can waste our lives as readily by inaction as by wrongdoing.

WE SHOULD KNOW NOW

We are greatly pleased to note that the faculty is finally taking action on the matter of publishing a Saga this year. In our opinion, the work of choosing an editor and of picking a staff must be completed before Christmas if a worthwhile annual is to be published. If we are not to publish an annual, we should know about it now. The students should now decide immediately about this matter.

The matter of day students using rooms in the dormitory was discussed, but not acted upon.

The Choir concluded the program singing "Bless the Lord," by Tchaikovsky; "Gospod Pomilui," by Lvovsky, and "In Heaven Above," by Christiansen.

"Mother" Kreidler, our dean of women, admits that her job it sometimes tiresome and trying, but she prefers it to cooking meals and washing dishes three times a day. And next to her boys and girls she likes art best.

Mrs. Kreidler studied art at Carlton College, Northfield, Minnesota, and at the University of Minnesota. She specialized in portrait work. She spent three years under the tutelage of Douglas Volk, who has painted our most popular portrait of Lincoln, at the Minnesota School of Fine Arts.

Until half an hour before she signed a contract to teach the primary grades in an eastern school, Mrs. Kreidler had never considered teaching as a career. When Mrs. Kreidler accepted the position of Dean of Women at Pacific Lutheran College, the school boasted an enrollment of 51 students. She began teaching art the second year she was here and has continued her double duties since that time.

Her years as a dean have not hardened her into an inhuman and grouchy "boss" because Mrs. Kreidler has three sons of her own and has lived in such constant association with youth that she maintains a sympathetic understanding with the young people.

Pictures Hanging in Mr. Hauge's Office Stimulate Curiosity

The four pictures which hang in the registrar's office have aroused much curiosity in the minds of many of our college students, and some enlightenment is due these students.

The picture nearest the entrance from the main hall is a representation of Reverend B. A. Harstad, founder and first president of our college. He has been intensely active in church work, and has been instrumental in founding several of our church schools.

The next picture is of Reverend U. V. Koren. He also has been very active in church work, and was a teacher at Luther College. He is the author of several books and poems in the Norwegian language.

Next is a picture of Reverend Laur Larsen. Besides being an influential church worker, he was connected with several of our church schools, and has been editor of several of our church newspapers.

The last picture is of Reverend A. Mikkelson. He also is an author of several Norwegian books, and through his connections with the church, he was able to do much to help our school get the support of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America when Pacific Lutheran College was being organized.

Mme. Pirie Beyea gave an interesting analysis of Russian problems and ideals at Luther College recently. Mme. Beyea has recently returned from a tour of Russia.

"After all, I never intended to become a teacher," says Dean Phillip E. Hauge. But he did, as we know, and no P. L. C. student regrets it.

Mr. Hauge attended St. Olaf College, also his father's alma mater, with the intention of later studying law. Perhaps his conscience did not allow him to carry out his purpose in the face of the old saying "Not all liars are lawyers, but all lawyers are liars." As it was, he turned to the realm of psychology, a subject which he teaches with marked ability. Mr. Hauge, however, thinks that he is a very poor psychologist when dealing with his own children.

At present Mr. Hauge is both student and professor, spending three afternoons a week at the University of Washington. Very fond of reading, he often becomes so absorbed in his studies that his wife has great difficulty in attracting his attention. Would that he might pass a major portion of his power of concentration to his students.

Seriously, Mr. Hauge is heart and soul in the work for the advancement of Pacific Lutheran College.

Twenty-Two Men Seeking Positions

Games Being Arranged Before Christmas Vacation as Practice Tills; Tall Men Out for Guard Posts

After a week of hard practice, 22 Gladiator hoopsmen are hard at work trying to clinch a position on the varsity five. The material is especially good. Many of the new men out have been stars on their high school outfits before coming to the College, and Coach Cliff Olson is having a difficult time in trying to make a choice of man for his first outfit.

Olson is trying to schedule games before the Christmas vacation, and is assured of 3 practice games before that time. One game will be played to-night with one of the best industrial teams of Tacoma. The arranging of the games is in the hands of Stan Anderson of the Washington Hardware, and as yet he has not announced the name of the Tacoma team. On Saturday night of this week, Olson will send his outfit into a doubleheader; one of the games will undoubtedly be against the Parkland Men's Club and the other against some industrial team. Coach Olson declares that he would not even try to name a starting five until after he had a chance to see several combinations in action in the practice game.

This season for the first time in his coaching career, Olson has a number of large men turning out for positions, and he hopes to find a guard combination with at least one of these rangier men on his first five. Levinson, stand out on this season eleven, Martin, a tackle, and Runsvold, another tackle, are three of the big boys that Olson is trying out at the guard posts. In the past the Gladiators were always placed at great disadvantages when out against some of the larger quints whose players played in a much higher altitude than most of the Parklanders. This season, if the Coombs, present plans are successful, the postolers will have much better chances against teams that feature height in their players.

There are many very good small men out for the guard posts, all of whom have equal chances of making the varsity first lineup. Olson declares that it is a virtual tossup between Monson, and Hauke, letterman guards of last season. Moe and Poffenroth who are now working together in fine shape, and Redden for the back court jobs. "Red" Carlson, star center, on last season's quint, will be moved over to the guard post for a tryout at that position according to Coach Olson.

At the forward births it is still a question as to what combination will get the call. Carlson, if Olson keeps him at that place, Padness and Sanderson are last year's award winners back for that spot. Krogh, Bergert and Spencer are the new men that are showing well at the forward job. Milton, a letter winner two years ago, gets the call most frequently as the starting center. Sydow, Spender and Carlson get the call at the pivot position at other times. Others turning out are: Southworth, Moore, Westlund, Jensen, Knutzen and Lund.

Postage Stamp Book Found in Dim recess By Snoopy Reporter

Whose child has not, at some time or other, made an intensive search for unusual or different postage stamps? Perhaps you can remember yourself a few years ago, scanning each day's mail in the hopes of finding another stamp to add to your growing collection. And how many times did you not puzzle over the difficulty of classifying some especially rare specimen? At such a time a search of one book in the Pacific Lutheran College library could have enlightened you. For college students who are still interested in the stamp collecting hobby, this book is very interesting.

Tucked away in a recess at the back of the library, and crouched between heavy, ponderous-looking volumes is a small, drab green book. But within its covers are likenesses of stamps from all corners of the earth, from all countries, great or small. Some are severely plain, others are highly decorated, many carry portraits of famous or symbolic men and women. Some are works of art, some a conglomeration of jumbled lines and letters but all are interesting, especially to the one who keeps a scrap book collection of stamps.

Girl Basket Ball Players Find Gym Floor is Hard

A gym floor is not a very soft thing to fall upon! Especially if you happen to have come two hundred pounds holding you down. Not that any one of our fair feminine basket-ball players weighs two-hundred pounds. But, then, there is always more than one who falls when you do. Girls' basket-ball seems to be different from that of boys' in that respect!

But a few jars and knocks don't seem to bother these would-be players. They say variety is the spice of life. There is plenty of variety in basket-ball. Look at the different places and positions you fall in and the various fellow-players you bring down with you!
